JEDBURGH.

JEDBURGH is a royal burgh, the county town, the seat of a presbytery, the head of a poor combination and a parish, 56 miles south-east from Edinburgh (by Lauder), 16 south-by-west from Kelso, the same distance north-east from Hawick and 12 north from the English border; agreeably situate on the left bank of the Jed, the name of which river, with weorth, the Saxon name for hamlet, formed its ancient appellation of Jedeworth, or Jedworth: in the course of time it became perverted to its present designation, but through a very extensive district in the south the old name is partly retained by pronouncing it Jeddart, or Jethart, which are almost exclusively used by the common people. Under the provisions of the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 123, a part of Oxnam parish has been transferred to Jedburgh and part of the latter parish annexed to Oxnam. The town, which stands on the declivity of a hill, and surrounded on every side by others of considerable height, is in general well built, and consists of four principal streets which cross each other at right angles, and form a square or market place in the centre. The streets and principal shops are lighted with gas, and the inhabitants are supplied with excellent water. The river Jed, which takes its rise in the Carter, one of the hills of the Cheviot range, and runs along the south-east side of the town, is crossed by no fewer than seven bridges within a mile. In recent times Jedburgh has been greatly improved, and many buildings have been erected. Jedburgh is a burgh of very ancient erection, and, from a charter granted by William the Lion, appears to have been a place of note previous to 1165. It has the honour of parochial precedency, being the oldest parish in Scotland of which any historical record has been transmitted to posterity. Prior to the Union it was a place of importance, and one of the principal towns in the south of Scotland. The burgh is governed by a provost, three bailies, a dean of guild, a treasurer, and a council elected by the constituents resident within the royalty. The lords justiciary and lords commissioners of the jury court hold courts here for the south circuit (which includes the counties of Roxburgh, Berwick and Selkirk), generally in April and September, and the sheriff holds a court on Thursday for the dispatch of civil business, and a small debt court and the ordinary sheriff court is held on the same day: the justices of the peace hold their court on the first Tuesday in every month, and here also the court of general quarter session sits. The burgh formerly joined with Haddington, Dunbar, North Berwick and Lauder in returning one member to Parliament, but under the "Redistribution Act, 1885," it is now merged in the county. The Town Hall is a commodious edifice, built in 1811. The Corn Exchange is in Exchange street. The Gaol and Bridewell, designated the "Castle," from its occupying the site of the ancient fortress, is a fine erection in the Castellated style, but is no longer used as a prison; from its elevated situation a delightful view is obtained. The manufacture of tweeds, blankets, plaidings &c. is carried on to a large extent, and in the neighbourhood are many corn mills. Considerable trade is derived from the orchards and gardens that surround the town. The market is held on Tuesday, and fairs on the first Tuesday in March, 16th May if Tuesday, if not the Tuesday preceding, first Tuesday after 26th May, 20th July (or two days after St. Boswell's), 20th August if Tuesday, if not the Tuesday preceding, 25th September, and servants' hiring first Tuesday in November. Golf links were opened near the town in October, 1893; the course is a nine-hole one and extends over a mile and a half.

Jedburgh Abbey, the principal architectural and antiquarian object of attraction in the town, standing between the houses and the river, was founded for canons regular by David I. about the year 1118 or 1147: although for the most part in a ruinous condition, it still exhibits an outline of its original magnitude and magnificence; the principal parts now remaining are the nave of nine bays, 130 feet long, nearly the whole of the choir, with the south aisle, the centre tower 90 feet in height, and the north transept, which is the burial place for the Kerr family, Barons Jedburgh and Marquesses of Lothian: the west front is very lofty, divided into three by pilaster buttresses, the great door being round-headed and deeply recessed; above is a two-light Pointed window, a marigold window being in the gable: in February, 1286, Alexander III. was married here to Jolande, daughter of Count de Dreux: at various periods the buildings have suffered by fire in the many conflicts of early times, and in 1559 they were reduced entirely to ruin; several years since the structure received considerable repairs, judiciously conducted as not to interfere with or alter the original design of the structure, which is of Gothic and Norman order. Hartrigge House, in a large park, is the seat of Lord Stratheden and Campbell J.P. The Marquess of Lothian K.T., P.C. is the principal landowner in the parish. Jedburgh parish comprises an area of 22,535 acres; rateable value, £34,554; the population in 1881 was returned at 5,147, and in 1891, 4,814, and the town 3,406 of that number.

KELSO.

KELSO is a burgh of barony, police burgh, market town, the head of a poor combination and parish, 52 miles south-east from Edinburgh, 10 north-north-east from Jedburgh, 23 south-west from Berwick-upon-Tweed, 60 north-by-east from Carlisle and 6 west from the English border; it is connected with the North British railway from Hawick and Melrose and the North-Eastern railway from Newcastle and Berwick, by branches which approach within a mile of the town, and it occupies an extensive plain on the north bank of the Tweed, opposite the confluence of the Teviot with that river, surrounded on all sides by a delightful amphitheatre of wood-clad hills. Kelso is of very great antiquity, and has been the scene of many memorable events in early history: its border situation subjected it to almost continual incursions of enemies, and to several conflagrations: it is built after the manner of the Flemish towns, having a spacious square in the centre, from which diverge four principal streets. The bridge which crosses the Tweed was built in the beginning of the present century, at a cost of about £18,000, after a plan by the late Sir John Rennie, the architect of Waterloo Bridge, London, of which it may be said to be a copy: it consists of five arches of equal span, and from it some beautiful views can be obtained. About 200 yards above this bridge occurs the confluence of the Tweed and Teviot. The town is lighted with gas, and is well supplied with spring and river water. The government is vested in a senior and two junior magistrates and a body of commissioners of police, who derive their powers from the Scotch Burgh Police Act. The Town Hall, on the east side of the square, erected in 1816, contains a portrait of an ancestor of the Duke of Roxburghe: in this hall periodical courts are held by the sheriff, justices of the peace and magistrates, as are also the meetings of the commissioners of police: on the ground floor is a large enclosed piazza, which on market days is used by the farmers and others attending the market. In the Wood market a Corn Exchange has been erected, which has proved of service to the farmers and merchants. The literary institutions include several libraries and two news and reading rooms, a Mechanics' Institute and Working Men's Club, an association entitled the Tweedside Physical and Antiquarian Society, and several benefit societies. The principal branches of business are comprised in an extensive manure and oilcake factory, an iron foundry, and carriage building and fishing tackle works; there are also many corn mills in the neighbourhood. The domestic trade of Kelso is well supported, and many of the shops are well stocked. The weekly market, chiefly for corn, and in the winter months for store cattle, is held on Friday, and a market for fat cattle and sheep is held once a fortnight, on Monday. An annual fair and also the annual show of the Border Union Agricultural Society takes place on the 5th of August. There are four banks, branches respectively of the Bank of Scotland, the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, the National Bank of Scotland Limited, and the British Linen Company Bank. The principal hotel is the "Cross Keys." Two newspapers are published in Kelso, under the titles of the "Kelso Mail" (established in 1797), and the "Kelso Chronicle" (in 1832). Among the several benevolent institutions supported by the inhabitants is the Dispensary, founded in 1777, which has been reorganised, the scheme for extending its usefulness including the employment of a staff of nurses for the treatment of poor persons either within the institution or at their own homes; there is also a society for educating poor children. At the east end of the town is Shedden Park, presented to the inhabitants by Mrs. Robertson, of Ednam House, in memory of her nephew, who perished in the search for Sir John Franklin. Steeplechases are held in the spring, they being superior to any meetings of the kind in Scotland: the course is about a mile to the northward: on it is a stand on the model of that at Doncaster. On the north bank of the Tweed is Floors Castle, the princely residence of the Duke of Roxburghe, a fine baronial building, originally erected in 1718, surrounded by a noble park. On the south bank of the Teviot is Springwood Park, the beautiful seat of Sir George Brisbane Douglas bart. D.L., J.P. In the centre may be seen the ancient border castle of Roxburgh, with the Eldon Hills in the distance.

The venerable remains of Kelso Abbey are entirely of the Transition Norman style, of which it is a splendid specimen: this mitred abbey of S.S. Mary and John the Evangelist, was founded by David I. in 1128, and exhibits the massiveness of Norman construction: the existing portion consists of the northern part of the west front, the transept, in more perfect condition, 76 feet by 23 feet, two bays of the choir and two sides of the central tower, which is 91 feet high and 23 feet square: the triforium and clerestory form continuous Norman arcades, supported by arches, these resting on heavy, low pillars, 7 feet in diameter: during the repairs of this monument of ancient ecclesiastical magnificence some years ago, the fragment of a bell was found, which is supposed to have been, when perfect, about 3 feet in diameter and one ton and a half in weight: Earl Henry of Northumberland, the founder's son, was buried here in 1152; James III. was crowned, Aug. 1460, in the abbey, which was burnt by the Earl of Hertford, 1545, when held by a garrison; again burnt by LordHunsdon in 1570. The Highlanders under Macintosh spent a night in Kelso, and proclaimed King James, 1715. Prince Charles Edward passed through the town 1745. The Duke of Roxburghe is lord of the manor and principal landowner. Acreage of the parish, 5,384; rateable value, £ ; population in 1881, 5,235, and in 1891, 4,730, of which the burgh contained 4,184; the population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1891 was 4,662.

LINTON is a parish, in Kelso poor combination and small debt court district, extending 9 miles in length by 3 in breadth, bounded by Sprouston on the north, Northumberland on the east, Eckford on the west and Yetholm and Morebattle on the south. It is separated from the latter parish by the Kaile. Besides that stream it has two small lochs, one of which abounds with trout, the other with eels. The land which rises from the Kaile is under the best system of cultivation. The kirktown is about 5 miles east from Kirkbank railway station on the Jedburgh branch of the North British railway, about 10 north-east from Jedburgh, and 6 south from Kelso. The church, which is beautifully seated on a high sand mound, is an old edifice, remodelled internally: there is an old carving of the legend of the "Worm of Wormington" on the outer wall. Robert Henry Elliot esq. D.L., J.P. of Clifton Park, is the lord of the manor and principal landowner. Acreage, 6,393; rateable value, £6,303; population in 1881, 543, and in 1891, 468.

MAXTON is a parish, in Jedburgh poor combination and Duns small debt court district; it is about 4 miles in length by 3 in breadth, in a rich agricultural district, well enclosed and planted, and is bounded on the south-west by the Roman road Watling, which separates it from Ancrum, north by the river Tweed, which divides it from Berwickshire, and east and south-east by Roxburgh. In the village is a station on the Roxburgh and St. Boswells section of the North British railway, 6 miles west from Roxburgh and about 1 from St. Boswells church, and is on the road between those two places. At Rutherford, a small hamlet in the parish, is also a station on the same branch, 1 mile east from Maxwell. On the west side of the parish church is an old Norman doorway, and the church is the burial place of the Kerrs, of Littledean. On the estate of Littledean, about a mile distant, are the remains of an old tower, once a strong fortification, and long the residence of the Kerrs. At Lilliard's Edge, on the boundary betwixt this parish and that of Ancrum, was fought the famous battle between the Scots under Angus Arran and Scott of Buccleuch, and English under Sir Ralph Evers and Sir Brian La Toun, early in 1545, when the latter were totally routed with the loss of a thousand men slain and made prisoners. Col. Sir William George Herbert Taylor Ramsay Fairfax bart. J.P. is lord of the manor and principal landowner. Acreage, 4,422; rateable value, £6,180; population in 1881, 426, and in 1891, 473.

MELROSE.

MELROSE is a police burgh and parish in Galashiels poor combination, bounded on the east by the Leader water, a feeder of the river Tweed; the town, small and ancient, is 36 miles south-by-east from Edinburgh, 12 north-west from Jedburgh, 7 north-east from Selkirk and 4 south-east from Galashiels, delightfully situated at the foot of the Eildon Hills, and on the line of the North British railway. The station, a spacious structure, presents a very fine appearance, and being on rising ground, may be seen from all parts of the neighbourhood. The town is built in the form of a triangle, with small streets leading from the corners: in the centre stands the cross, a structure supposed to be coeval with the abbey: there are a number of modern houses in the western suburbs, while others exhibit proofs of great antiquity, presenting decorated stones that once undoubtedly formed a portion of the superb abbey for which the place is so celebrated. The town is on the south bank of the Tweed, which is clothed with plantations in the finest order, and about 2 miles west receives the Allan and Gala waters. Buckholm Hill, 1,064 feet high, is in the parish. Previous to the abolition of hereditary jurisdictions, Melrose was a burgh of regality, and afterwards a free burgh of barony. In the beginning of 1895 it was formed into a police burgh under the "Burgh Police (Scotland) Act, 1892," including the village of Darnick, which joins Melrose on the west. It is governed by nine commissioners, including a provost and two bailies. A sheriff's small debt court is held four times a year, on the last Fridays of March, June, September and December. A justice of peace court is held as occasion demands. The Corn Exchange, standing in the Market place, is a structure containing an elegant hall, which will hold 500 people. There are four hotels and posting houses in the town, namely, the Abbey, the George, the Station and the King's Arms. A large pond for skating during the winter months has been constructed at the west end of the town. The Ormiston Institute, erected out of a sum of £4,000 bequeathed by Mr. Charles W. Ormiston, of Melrose, comprises a library, containing about 500 volumes, reading and smoking rooms and billiard room; the cost, including the furniture, being £1,700: the remainder of the capital sum is held as an endowment fund. The Roxburgh, Berwick and Selkirk District Lunatic Asylum, about three-quarters of a mile from the town, at the foot of the Eildon Hills, opened in May, 1872, was erected at a cost of £57,000, and will hold between 200 and 300 patients: the building is beautifully situated, and with the grounds occupy an area of nearly 35 acres. About a mile north of Melrose is the Waverley Hydropathic Establishment, on a site dry and airy, and well sheltered from the prevailing westerly winds: it commands a fine view to the south and east, including the three-peaked Eildon Hills, and some beautiful stretches of the river Tweed, the valley of which lies open as far as Leaderfoot, and the view is bounded by the heights of Bemersyde: the site of the building is the Skirmish hill, where was fought one of the last border frays of the district.

Melrose Abbey, the finest and largest of the great border abbeys, was founded by King David, in 1136, and colonised by Cistercians from Rievaulx, in Yorkshire: it was not consecrated until 1246, and lasted until 1544, when it was ruined by the Earl of Hertford: after having been frequently burnt and pillaged in the many border forays, it suffered so much in 1322, when Edward II. gave it up to fire and sword, that it had to be almost rebuilt, and it is from this period that the present remains mostly date. The Great church, standing in a meadow on the south side of the Tweed, between which and the church were the cloisters and conventual buildings, was 258 feet in length, the breadth of the nave being 69 feet, including the south chapels, and the choir was 28 feet in breadth, while the transept extended 137 feet from north to south, and it had eastern aisles, but none on the west side: the principal entrance to the church seems to have been in the south transept: the existing remains consist of the south wall of the nave, or rather of the eight lateral chapels, each lighted by a fine four-light window, of which much of the tracery remains; indeed, the windows, large and elegant with good tracery still extant, are a feature of the ruins, which, though now roofless, have a more perfect appearance than many of its contemporaries: on the north of the nave, the wall of the aisle adjoining to the cloisters still remains, and is about half the original length of that side of the nave, and across the fourth bay, from the tower, extends the rood loft, on a somewhat heavy screen; more eastward is the western wall of the great central tower, which was 84 feet in height, rising one story above the roof, and 44 feet square, machicolated and having angle turrets: the walls of the transepts with its southern gable remain, and the great five-light window over the south doorway retains its tracery, while the doorway itself is a fine specimen of a recessed pointed arch: of the chancel of two bays a great portion of the walls remain, as well as much of the window tracery; that of the great east window being entire and a good instance of Perpendicular work: two of the flying buttresses also exist: the domestic buildings, however, have disappeared: two of the nave chapels retain their vaulting, and there is some over the altar: the clerestory is Perpendicular. The heart of Robert Bruce, and the bodies of Kings Alexander II. (1249) and Alexander III. (1286), rest here, and here likewise was buried the remains of Earl William Douglas, "the dark knight of Liddesdale" (1353), and William Douglas, who died from wounds received at Poictiers, in 1384. There is a slab of black marble over the grave of St. Waldare, the second abbot (1158). About 2 miles east from the town is the site of the still more ancient abbey of Old Melrose, founded in 664, and said to be the first abbey of the Culdees settled in this part of the kingdom: all that remains, however, of this structure is a small ruin on a peninsula formed by the Tweed, whose banks around it are lofty and wooded, varied with perpendicular rocks, jutting out into the river like buttresses; the situation commands a fine view of the valley of the Tweed.

Abbotsford, for many years the residence of Sir Walter Scott, and in fact created by him, lies 3 miles west from Melrose, on the south bank of the Tweed, just below its junction with the Ettrick, and is now very much as Scott left it; he bought the property in 1811, probably influenced in his selection by the fact that he was himself descended from the Hallburtons, of New Mains, on the same river at the other side of the parish. The house, composed of a square tower (a feature which appears in so many Scottish baronial residences), to which is added a series of gable-fronted buildings, the whole presenting a fine appearance from the river: on entering by a Gothic porch, the hall, panelled with oak, is reached, and from it is the broad corridor or armoury, hung round with arms, targets and trophies, collected by Sir Walter, and include many Highland relics: on either side of this corridor are the drawing and dining rooms, the former, a fine saloon, containing many cabinets and specimens of old furniture, and the latter having on its walls a good collection of pictures, including several fine portraits: the remaining public rooms are the breakfast parlour, in an angle overlooking the Tweed and the Yarrow, having a collection of water-colour drawings; the study, a small room, with a light gallery running round it, and opening from it is the closet on one side, and on the other the library, a room 60 feet long by 50 broad, with a carved oak ceiling, and containing about 20,000 volumes. Around the house and grounds are many specimens of carved stonework, including the gate of the old Tolbooth of Edinburgh: the grounds were laid out by Sir Walter Scott, and comprise many seats placed so as to command the best views. Sir Walter died here in September, 1832, and was buried in the Haliburton vault. The nearest railway station to the house is Abbotsford Ferry, on the Selkirk and Galashiels line, and the house can be viewed by permission of the present owner, the Hon. Joseph Constable-Maxwell Scott D.L., J.P. Drygrange is the seat of Edward W. Sprott esq. J.P.; Huntlyburn House, of Mrs. Kerr; Wooplaw, John Murray esq. J.P.; Eildon Hall, in this parish, is the seat of the Duke of Buccleuch and Queensberry K.T. Acreage of the parish, previous to alteration of the boundary, 25,794; rateable value, £40,968; population of the civil parish in 1881, 4,519, and in 1891, 4,882, of which the town contained 1,432; population of ecclesiastical parish in 1891, 4,366. Under the provisions of the "Local Government Act, 1889" (52 & 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 126, parts of the parishes of Earlston and Lauder, in Berwickshire, have been transferred to Melrose.

Gattonside is a rural village, standing on the north bank of the Tweed, in the parish of Melrose, situated 1 mile north therefrom, and with which town a communication is maintained by means of a suspension bridge, which was opened on the 26th of October, 1826: for each passenger a charge of a halfpenny was made until Whit Sunday, 1885, when the bridge was made free. The village is surrounded with orchards, and it is computed that a greater quantity of fruit is grown about this place than in any other part of the vale of the Tweed. There is a board school in the village. Population in 1891, 288.

Darnick, a small village in Melrose parish, was in the beginning of 1895 made part of the burgh of Melrose, situated on the road leading to Galashiels, and now almost joined to Melrose town. In the centre of the village stands the ancient stronghold of the lairds of Darnick, called Darnick Tower, now the residence of Andrew Grainger Heiton esq. Population in 1881, 448, and in 1891, 307.

Newstead is a small village in Melrose parish, 1 mile east therefrom, near which once stood the "Red Abbey;" population in 1891, 252.

Blainslie is a small rural village in the parish of Melrose, at its northern extremity, on the Berwickshire border, and on the road from Earlston to Lauder, 4 miles north-by-west from Earlston station on the St. Boswells and Greenlaw section of the North British railway, and about 7 miles north from the town of Melrose.

MOREBATTLE is a parish, in Kelso poor combination and small debt court district; it is about 9 miles in length with a mean breadth of 4, and is bounded by Linton and Yetholm on the north, Eckford on the west, Hownam on the south-west, and the county of Northumberland on the south and east. The greater part of the land is hilly and pastoral, the low grounds only being arable. The Kale and Bowmont run through the parish, both waters affording excellent sport to the angler. The village, which is becoming a summer resort, and stands near the Kale river, is 5 miles east from Ormiston station on the Jedburgh branch of the North British railway, 7½ south-east from Kelso, and 10 east-northeast from Jedburgh. The ancient and more correct mode of spelling the name is "Morebotle," which signifies "the dwelling place at the marsh." The vestiges of ancient camps and various ruins, particularly Whitton Castle and Corbet House, indicate this parish to have been the scene of frequent warfare. The Duke of Roxburghe is lord of the manor and principal landowner. Acreage of the parish, 22,334; rateable value, £11,002; population in 1881, 1,003, and in 1891, 846.

ROXBURGH is a small village and parish, in Kelso poor combination and small debt court district, and is bounded by Makerstoun and Kelso on the north, Maxton on the west, the Roman road, Watling Street, which divides it from Ancrum, on the south, and Crailing and Eckford on the east. The village is about 2 miles west from the station, where is the junction for Jedburgh, on the North British railway, and 3 south from Kelso. The ruins of the once famous castle of Roxburgh are still to be seen crowning a high mound, picturesquely situated in the narrow space between the Tweed and Teviot and about 2 miles from the site of the present village. Near the castle, and between it and the Tweed, stood the old burgh of Roxburgh, which has entirely disappeared; the castle was demolished by the Scots in 1460, after they had retaken it from the English, and the burgh having lost its protection gradually decayed. The remains of a border "keep" may be seen in a field near the parish church, the lower part only, consisting of a stone vaulted chamber, being preserved; it is popularly called "Wallace's Tower." It was burned by the Earl of Hertford in his marauding expedition of 1545. The ancient fair of St. James of Roxburgh is still held annually, in the parish, on Aug. 5th, on St. James's green, close to the site of the old burgh: it was mentioned in a charter of William the Lion to the monks of Kelso, and for long it was the best known fair in the south of Scotland. Sunlaws, the seat of Captain Robert Scott-Kerr, is in this parish. His Grace the Duke of Roxburghe is lord of the manor and principal landowner. Acreage, 7,781; rateable value, £13 545; population in 1881, 1,012, and in 1891, 954.

Heiton is a village in the parish, and is on the road from Kelso to Jedburgh.

ST. BOSWELLS (or Lessudden) is a parish, in Melrose small debt court district, bounded on the north by the river Tweed, west by Melrose and Bowden and south-east by Ancrum and Maxton, and is 3 miles in length by from 1½ to 2 in breadth, beautifully enclosed, planted and cultivated. On the west rise the Eildon hills, and on the east and north the ground is undulating, the latter quarter ornamented by the fine woods of Dryburgh, separated from the village by the Tweed, which is here a beautiful river, enclosed within high banks. The village of St. Boswells, nearly in the centre of the parish, consists of one long street, running east and west from the green, and is 1 mile west from the St. Boswells station on the North British railway, 10 south-west from Kelso, 9 north-north-west from Jedburgh, and 4 south-east from Melrose. A few years ago great improvements were effected in the village, and an ample supply of water is now obtained from Whiterigg Bog. The Buccleuch Arms hotel, much frequented during the hunting season, is situate on the green. Here, too, are the kennels belonging to the Duke of Buccleuch's foxhounds, which pack is the largest in the south of Scotland, and hunts the three counties of Roxburgh, Selkirk and Berwick. On the green at St. Boswells is held on the 18th of July one of the most important horse fairs in Scotland. This fair also attracts a large number of salesmen of miscellaneous goods, and it is still frequented by the direct descendants of the gipsies for the disposal of earthen, horn and tin wares. There are several seats in the parish, Maxpoffle, the seat of Lady Boyd; Benrig, of William Brownrigg Elliot esq. J.P.; Holmes, of Daniel Norman Ritchie esq.; Lessudden House, of Walter Scott esq. and Dryburgh Abbey, the property of George O. H. E. Biber Erskine esq. J.P. and at present occupied by Lady Ewing. Lord Polwarth is the chief landowner. Acreage of the parish, 3,155; rateable value, £9,652; the population in 1881 was 959, and in 1891, 962, and 564 in the village.

Post, Telegraph & Money Order Office & Savings Bank; Joseph Turnbull, postmaster. Letters received through Newtown St. Boswells. Deliveries, 9.30 a.m. & 6.30 p.m.; dispatches, 7.15 a.m. & 1.40 & 5 p.m

TEVIOTHEAD is a parish, in Hawick poor combination and small debt court district, 10 miles long and 8 miles broad, bounded on the north by Roberton and Hawick, Dumfries-shire on the south, on the south-east by Castleton and Cavers. The parish church is about 9 miles south-west of Hawick station on the North British railway. It is a mountainous district, and famous for its breed of Cheviot sheep. As its name implies, the source of the Teviot is in this parish, and the Allan water, a feeder of it, runs through the eastern part of it. Cauldcleugh Head mountain, 1,986 feet, and Wisp hill, 195 feet high, are in the parish. A monument erected to Henry Scott Riddle, former minister of the parish and author of "Scotland Yet," stands on the summit of one of the hills, and it was at the churchyard here that Johnnie Armstrong (mentioned in the "Tales of the Borders") and his band, was hanged by James V. The Duke of Buccleuch K.T. is lord of the manor and principal landowner. Acreage, 31,458; rateable value, £8,900; the population in 1891 was 453.

WILTON, see HAWICK.

YETHOLM parish, in Kelso poor combination and small debt court district of Jedburgh, is bounded on the north-east and east by the English border, and divided into nearly equal parts by the water of Bowmont, an excellent trouting stream. The surface is hilly, but covered with verdure, and is pastured by numerous flocks of sheep. Situated on the western boundary is Yetholm or Primside Loch, measuring nearly a mile and a half in circumference. There are considerable haughs (or meadows) on the banks of the Bowmont; the soil is good, and adapted for wheat. The parish comprises two villages, or rather a village in two parts, situate on either side of the Bowmont; that on one side, called Yetholm, is 4½ miles west from Mindrum station on the Coldstream and Ainwick branch of the North Eastern railway, and about 8 south from Kelso; the other, designated Kirk-Yetholm, which is an improving place, is about a quarter of a mile on the other side of the stream. Yetholm is acquiring a reputation as a resort for invalids in the summer. A fine view of the vale of Bowmont is had from the street going up the hill, named Starioch. The fairs formerly held at the villages are now discontinued, but an annual sheep show for shepherds' packs is held in October. Yetholm formerly was mostly inhabited by gipsies—a race remarkable for their disorderly lives and dangerous characters, and distinguished by peculiarity of habits from the general body of the community. Now, however, none follow the nomadic life of the tribe, all having betaken themselves to farm labour. The old parish church, which at the time of its demolition was the oldest thatched church in Scotland, has been replaced by an elegant edifice of black stone, with dressings of white. Colonel Andrew G. Wauchope C.B. of Niddrie and the Marquess of Tweeddale, of Yester House, Haddington, are the principal landowners. Acreage of the parish, 5,960; rateable value, £5,322; population in 1881, 1,045, and in 1891, 884, and Yetholm and Kirk-Yetholm village, 590.

SELKIRKSHIRE

IS a small county in the south of the kingdom and considered one of the border counties; it is bounded on the north by Edinburghshire and the northern part of Roxburghshire, east by this latter county, south by Dumfries-shire and west by Peebles-shire; its form is irregular and its extent is 27 miles from south-west to north-east, and 17 in breadth, exclusive of a small detached part on the east. Its area comprehends 257 square miles, or 164,545 acres. The population in 1891 comprised 12,743 males, and 14,610 females, total, 27,353, and in 1881 a total of 25,564; the inhabited houses in 1891 were 5,385, and in 1881, 5,082. In size Selkirk stands as the twenty-sixth, and in population the twenty-eighth of the counties of Scotland.

Early History.—This border county was formerly designated the "Sheriffdom of Ettrick Forest," from being in a great measure the vale of the Ettrick and its tributary streams, and from its being covered with wood. It was stocked with large herds of deer, and formed a favourite scene for the enjoyment of the chase by the Scottish monarchs. In many royal charters it is entitled "The Forest," and before regular sheriffs were appointed it was placed under the jurisdiction of a keeper, who generally held the office of constable of the King's Castle at Selkirk. Placed as it is between the eastern portion of the kingdom, where the influence of the Earls of Northumberland prevailed, and before them of the East Anglians and kindred tribes, and the western shires, where the Dalriadans and Strathclyde Britons held sway, it was much under the control of its stronger neighbours, and has less of a history of its own than a share of that of other shires; the Romans occupied it during their stay of 350 years, but have left few traces of their presence. A stupendous work of the Romanised Britons called the "Catrail," once a vast fosse, having a rampart on either side, constructed during the 5th century as a strong line of defence against the invading Saxons, belongs to a rather later period and the central position of the county placed it beyond the direct routes of armies proceeding to either the east or west coast. About 1120 David I. at that time an Earl and not having yet succeeded to the throne, founded a monastery at Selkirk, afterwards transferred to Kelso, but unlike Roxburghshire, this county contains few or no remains of ecclesiastical establishments, though it possesses a number of ruined "keeps," the seats of feudal strength.

Surface, Produce, Manufactures &c.—With the exception of a very narrow portion on its eastern side, the county may be said to be a continual alternation of hill and dale, and many of the eminences rise to a considerable height. The principal vales are those of the Ettrick and Yarrow, besides a portion of the vale of the Tweed and the Gala; from these valleys there shoot out many "cleughs" and "hopes," that run up for some distance between the heights. Around Galashiels and Selkirk the hills are now under cultivation and wheat is raised at a considerable elevation above the level of the sea. In the upper valleys of Ettrick and Yarrow, tillage is confined to the haughs and low grounds contiguous. The principal mountains, with their altitudes, are—Ettrick Pen, 2,269; the Wiss, 1,932; Elibank Law, 1,715; Brown Knowe, 1,718; Sauchie Law, 1,449; Hopehead, 1,697 and Black Knowe, 1,806. Great attention is paid to sheep farming and the improvement in the breed of sheep; this was stimulated by a Lord Napier, who betook himself to the vale of Ettrick, and commenced farming. The shire is almost wholly stocked with white-faced sheep, except in a high tract of country towards the sources of its rivers, of which Hindhope, on the Ettrick, and Lawdhope, on the Yarrow, are the lowest points. The chief crops are—oats, 5,228 acres; turnips, 2,957 and barley, 265; the total corn crops being 5,601 acres and the green crops 3,448 acres; land under grass, 10,051 acres and permanent pasture, 11,527 acres; total area of land and water, 172,428 acres; mountain and heath land, 131,208; hay chop, 2,504 acres. The live stock comprised in 1894—horses, 691; cattle, 3,626; sheep, 183,421 and pigs, 540. Of minerals, there are few in this county, it being deficient of coal, lime and sand stone; in some parts, however, abundance of whinstone is obtained, and a deal of granite. The manufactures, for which see Selkirk and Galashiels, consist in both towns of woollens, tweeds, tartans, shawls and hosiery, together with the tanning of leather and the dressing of sheep and lamb skins. There are also several engineering and machine making establishments.

Rivers, Lakes and Railways.—The county is well watered by the Ettrick, the Yarrow, and the Tweed. The latter river, after draining Peebles-shire, intersects the northern extremity of Selkirkshire from west to east, running in a deep channel of 9 miles, when it is joined by the Ettrick, and, receiving the Gala, passes on to Roxburghshire and Berwick-on-Tweed, where it empties itself into the German Ocean. The Gala cannot be counted as a river of this county; it takes its rise in the parish of Heriot, in the county of Edinburgh, and flowing through a portion of Roxburghshire, falls into the Tweed about a mile below Galashiels. The Yarrow has its source at a place called Yarrow Cleugh, near the rise of the Moffat Water, in Dumfries-shire, and falls into the Ettrick 2 miles above Selkirk. The county has some small lakes, the chief being St. Mary's Loch, 13 miles south-west from Selkirk, about 3 miles long, and less than 1 in breadth, and the Loch of the Lowes, about a mile in length, and a quarter of a mile broad, lying at the head of St. Mary's Loch. The mileage of railway actually within this county is very small, consisting as it does of about 12 miles of the Edinburgh and Peebles section of the North British line from Galashiels, through the northern extremity of the county, leaving it near Hoylee, and a shore branch from Galashiels to Selkirk; this extent of railway being, however, in the centre of a system gives easy access to Glasgow, Edinburgh, Berwick-on-Tweed, Newcastle and Carlisle.

Divisions, Representation &c.—The county of Selkirk contains only six complete parishes, and a portion of one other. There is a combination poor house at Galashiels, for paupers belonging to the parishes of Galashiels, Selkirk, Melrose and Yarrow. The only towns are those of Selkirk and Galashiels—the former a royal burgh, and these two join with Hawick in sending one member to Parliament. This county joins with Peebles-shire in returning a member to Parliament. The parliamentary constituency in 1894-5 was 798. The valuation of the county in 1894-5 (exclusive of burghs and railways), was £60,908; and of railways, £4,191.

CLOVENFORDS, see GALASHIELS.

ETTRICK is a large parish, in Selkirk poor combination and small debt court district, in the south-west of Selkirkshire, and is 13 miles long by from 2½ to 10 broad, bounded on the west by Peebles-shire, south by the county of Dumfries, west by Roxburghshire and Kirkhope, and north by Yarrow. The Established church, about the centre of the parish, on the road from Selkirk to Moffat, and near the Ettrick water, is 19 miles south-west from Selkirk terminal station on a branch of the North British railway from Galashiels, and 13 north-east from Moffat terminal station on a branch from Beattock on the Lockerbie line of the Caledonian railway. There is a Free church, serving for the two parishes of Ettrick and Kirkhope. The Loch of the Lowes, about 1 mile long by about half a mile wide, is in the parish, which is watered by several streams, the principal being the Ettrick water, a tributary of the Tweed, which rises in the south-western extremity of the parish, near Ettrick Pen, and running through the centre, receiving in its course the Tima water, and the Rankle, Tushielan and several other burns. The Yarrow water, in the north-west of the parish, falls in the St. Mary's Loch at the northern boundary. The parish is very mountainous. The highest mountains are Ettrick Pen, 2,269 feet; Capel Fell, 2,223; Andrewhinney Hill, 2,220; Wind Fell, 2,180; Bodesbeck Law, 2,173; Bellis Craig, 2,046; Herman Law, 2,014; Ward Law, 1,951, and Muckle Knees, 1,929. Thirlstane Castle, in a park over 1 mile long by a quarter of a mile wide, and near the Ettrick water, is the seat of Lord Napier and Ettrick K.T., P.C., D.L., J.P. The Duke of Buccleuch K.T. who is also lord of the manor, and Lord Napier and Ettrick K.T. are the principal landowners. In the northern part of this parish, at Chapelhope, a small hamlet at the head of the Loch of the Lowes, is a monument (consisting of a pedestal surmounted by a figure of a border shepherd), which has been erected in memory of James Hogg, known as the "Ettrick Shepherd," who was born in Ettrick forest either in December, 1770, or January, 1772, and died at Altrive in the adjoining parish of Yarrow in 1835; he was first brought to notice about 1801 by Sir Walter Scott, who, in 1807, encouraged him to print a volume of his poems; this, and a prize gained from the Highland Society for an Essay on Sheep, induced him in 1810 to take up the role of author, and he published a good many poetical and prose pieces, the best being "The Queen's Wake" and "The Brownie of Bodsbeck," and he wrote an account of his own life. Acreage, 42,387; rateable value, £9,400; population in 1881, 397, and in 1891, 414.

GALASHIELS.

GALASHIELS is a parliamentary burgh, market town and parish, and head of a poor combination, 31 miles south-south-east from Edinburgh, 18 east from Peebles, 6 north from Selkirk, 4 north-west from Melrose and 34 south-by-west from Berwick, with a station on the main line of the North British railway (Waverley route); there is also a branch line to Selkirk, and one to Innerleithen and Peebles. It is on a kind of tableland on both sides of the Gala, about a mile above the confluence of that river with the Tweed. The Gala is crossed by six bridges, two being for foot passengers only. The parish of Galashiels was formed, in the early part of the 17th century, out of the two old parishes, Lindean, in Roxburghshire, and Boldside, in Selkirkshire, and was in both counties until, under the provisions of the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), it has been placed wholly in Selkirkshire. The burgh joins with Hawick and Selkirk, under the name of the Hawick burghs, in sending one representative to Parliament, and is governed by a provost, four bailies and ten councillors. The town is comparatively of modern erection, the oldest houses not having been built more than a century, whilst the greater number have not existed more than 50 years. It is composed of several streets, most of which run parallel with the river; there are also a large number of villas in the immediate neighbourhood, these being the residences of the manufacturers and merchants of the town. The Old, or High Town, as it is now called, contains the parish church manse and a few of the original dwellings, and has been much improved and enlarged by new erections. A small debt court is held in the town on the second Mondays of February, April and June, the last Monday of July, the first Monday of October and second Monday of December. St. Paul's Established church, in Scott crescent, is a fine edifice, erected at a cost of £15,000, raised by voluntary contributions, from designs by Messrs. Hay and Henderson; it is built of red freestone, from the Belses quarry, in the florid Gothic style. The old Ladhope Free church has been replaced by a building in the Early English Pointed style, built from designs of Messrs. M'Kissack and Rowan, architects, of Glasgow, of whinstone of the district, with traceries and spire of freestone from Swinton quarries, at a cost of about £5,000: the foundation stone was laid in February, 1885, by Lord Reay. The Public Hall, erected by a joint-stock company, is a handsome building in High street, two storeys high, the upper storey being used for public meetings and concerts. A drill hall, erected for the F, G and H Companies of the 1st Roxburgh and Selkirk (The Border) Rifle Volunteers, is well adapted for public purposes. There are also four other halls which will hold from 300 to 500 persons. There is a free library in the town, opened October, 1874, maintained by the rates under the "Free Libraries Act," and containing at present upwards of 7,000 volumes in almost every department of literature; reading rooms are attached, and supplied with daily, weekly and monthly newspapers and magazines. The principal trade of Galashiels is the manufacture of tweeds, and there are many houses engaged in it. The manufacturers and weavers meet annually on the Friday nearest the 10th of October, for the purpose of electing a deacon of their trade, and conferring on matters therewith connected. Other trades are those in connection with coal, corn, timber and leather tanning. A grain market is held on Tuesday; a fair on the third Wednesday of March and a live stock sale every alternate Wednesday. In the town are branches of the National Bank of Scotland Limited, the Bank of Scotland, the Royal Bank of Scotland, the Commercial Bank Limited and the British Linen Company Bank. Two newspapers are published, the "Border Advertiser" and the "Scottish Border Record," which have a large circulation in the border counties. The Combination Poor House is at Windyknowe, and contains 65 beds. A Cottage Hospital, the funds for which were raised by public subscription, was erected at Eastlands in 1894, at a cost of £3,813; it contains 14 beds and is attended by the medical men of the town. The Hospital for Contagious Diseases is also at Eastlands and contains 10 beds. The Public Park, Abbotsford road, was presented to the town by John Henry Francis K. Scott esq. D.L., J.P. (of Gala) in 1882. Gala House, in a small park, is the seat of John Henry Francis Kinnaird Scott esq. D.L., J.P. The civil parish of Galashiels comprises an acreage of 8,439; gross rateable value of the parish, £76,162, the burgh, £68,279; the population in 1891 was 17,941; ecclesiastical, 7,460; in 1881 the town contained a population of 15,330, and in 1891, 11,033; police burgh, 17,252.

Clovenfords is a hamlet in this parish, 3 miles west from Galashiels. Here is a station on the Peebles branch of the North British railway, and the vineries and orchid nurseries of Messrs. William Thomson and Sons Limited, and close to it Meigle Hill, 1,387 feet in height; at Torwoodlee is a golf course.

INNERLEITHEN, a parish, formerly partly in this county, but chiefly in the adjoining county of Peebles, has now been transferred entirely to Peebles-shire under the provisions of the "Local Government Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50).

KIRKHOPE parish is in the presbytery of Selkirk, and in Hawick poor combination and Selkirk small debt court district; it formerly formed part of the parish of Yarrow, from which it was disjoined in 1851; it is 9 miles long by 5 broad, bounded on the north-west by Yarrow, north-east by Selkirk, east by Ashkirk and Roxburghshire, and south-west by Ettrick. The Ettrick water, which in its course is fed by several burns, flows through the north-west part of the parish, passing near the church. The parish is very hilly, there being 8 eminences in the parish above the height of 1,000 feet. A church of the Establishment and a Board school are at Ettrick Bridge End, a small village in Kirkhope, 7 miles south-west from Selkirk terminal station on the branch of the North British railway. Acreage, 22,724; rateable value, £6,955; population in 1881, 547, and in 1891, 500.

LINDEAN, see GALASHIELS.

ROBERTON is a parish, formerly partly in this county and partly in Roxburghshire, but is now included wholly in the latter county, under the provisions of the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50).

SELKIRK.

SELKIRK is an ancient town, a royal and police burgh, the seat of a presbytery, and the capital of its county and parish, in Galashiels poor combination, 38 miles south-south-east from Edinburgh, 22 east-by-south from Peebles, 12 north-north-west from Hawick, 8 south-west from Melrose, and 6 south from Galashiels, occupying a rising ground, at the foot of which flows the river Ettrick. The place derives its name from a kirk established here at an early date, when the locality became distinguished as a hunting seat of the kings. In the oldest charter it is called "Scheleschirche," which signifies the Kirk of the Shiels or Shielings. After the transfer to Kelso of a monastery founded here by David I. about 1113, the town around the old castle received the dignified title of "Selkirk Regis," while the village of the monks was denominated "Selkirk Abbatis." Of the Castle of Selkirk, at which David occasionally resided, little is known, and its size cannot now be satisfactorily ascertained. Formerly Selkirk exhibited an indifferent appearance in its buildings and their arrangement, but lately it has improved, and many private houses have been built in the vicinity of the town. A railway is open from here to Galashiels, where it joins the Waverley line of the North British system. The rivers Ettrick and Yarrow form a junction about a mile and a half south-west from Selkirk, and empty their waters into the Tweed, about 2 miles north of the town. As a royal burgh, Selkirk is governed by a provost, 2 bailies, a dean of guild, and eleven councillors, one-third of whom retire annually. The sheriff court is held on Friday. The magistrates hold criminal courts as occasion requires. Quarter sessions are held on the first Tuesday in March, May and August, and last Tuesday of October, and special justice of peace courts when found necessary. The old Town Hall in the Market place, which was the court room presided over by Sir Walter Scott as sheriff of the county, is now used for burgh courts, meetings of town council, police commissioners, and other public bodies. In 1870 buildings were completed for the business of the county, including sheriff court room, and offices for sheriff clerk, procurator fiscal, and other officials. Selkirk was in past ages celebrated for the making of brogues (a description of single-soled shoes); tradition carries the existence of this trade so far back as the period of the battle of Flodden, in which conflict, it is asserted, the brogue makers or "souters" of Selkirk took a distinguished part. As a further proof of the consequence and ability of the professors of this craft, it appears from the town records that when the Highland army, in 1745, commanded the magistrates of Edinburgh to furnish 6,000 pairs of shoes, these civic officials made a call upon the burgh of Selkirk for no less than a third of the quantity, which was supplied. The principal manufactures now carried on consist of various descriptions of woollen goods—tweeds, tartans, plaids and shawls—and wool spinning and tanning. The market is held on Wednesday, and fairs on the 5th April and 31st October. There is also an auction mart, where sales are held for cattle &c. fortnightly on Wednesday. Branches of the British Linen Company Bank, the National Bank of Scotland Lim. and the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, are here, and there is a Savings Bank. The town possesses three principal inns—namely the County, the Fleece, and the Station hotel. There are two weekly newspapers published, the "Southern Reporter" and the "Selkirk Advertiser." In the Market place is a fine monument to Sir Walter Scott, and, in High street, one in remembrance of Mungo Park, the African traveller, who was a native of Foulshields, in this county, born 1771 and drowned in the Niger, 1805; it is the work of Andrew Currie, a native artist. Bowhill, the beautiful mansion of the Duke of Buccleuch K.T., D.L. stands near the junction of the Yarrow and Ettrick waters, in a park about 1 mile long by half a mile broad, and contains a small lake. Philiphaugh, an ancient estate, an existing charter of which dates from the time of Robert the Bruce, and the scene of the disastrous battle in 1645, and now the residence of William Strang Steel esq. is a beautiful castellated mansion, in a park, on the north bank of the Yarrow. The Haining, the seat of Mrs. Pattison, is situated in a park about 1 mile long by half a mile broad, and contains a lake about a quarter of a mile in length. Broadmeadows, on the north bank of the Yarrow water, in a small park, is the seat of Hugh Morris Lang esq. Sunderland Hall, on the south bank of the Tweed, surrounded by small grounds, is the seat of Charles Henry Scott-Plummer esq. D.L., J.P. Whitmuir Hall is another seat in the parish. Newark Castle, now in ruins, and standing near the Yarrow water, was built by James II. and the royal arms, with the unicorn, are engraved on a stone in the western side, and the keeping of the castle has been confided to different barons. The office of keeper was latterly held by the Buccleuch family, and when the forest of Ettrick was disparked, they obtained a grant of the castle in perpetuity. The area of the civil parish is 22,559; rateable value of the parish, £39,078; of the burgh, £25,183; population in 1881, 7,432, and in 1891, 7,298; of the town, 6,397; royal burgh, 5,788; police burgh, 5,662; ecclesiastical parish, 4,999.

Under the provisions of the "Local Government Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), that part of Selkirk parish formerly in Roxburghshire has been added to this county.

Heatherlie is a quoad sacra parish, erected in January, 1885, and comprises about one-third of the area of the lower part of the parish. The population in 1891 was 2,252.

STOW is an extensive parish and village, partly in this county, but chiefly in the adjoining county of Edinburgh, where particulars will be found.

YARROW is a large parish, in the Galashiels poor combination, and presbytery and small debt court district of Selkirk, and is 15 miles long by from 1½ to 7 broad, bounded on the west and north by Peeblesshire, north-east by the river Tweed and south-east by Selkirk and Kirkhope and south by Ettrick. The Established church, about the centre of the parish, on the road from Selkirk to Moffat and the Yarrow water, is 9 miles south-west from Selkirk terminal station on a branch of the North British railway, and about the same distance south from Innerleithen station on the Galashiels and Peebles section of the same line. The parish is very picturesque, and its praises have been well sung by the "Ettrick Shepherd." St. Mary's Loch, which is about 3 miles long by half a mile broad, on the borders of Peebles-shire, is a great resort for visitors in summer, and excellent accommodation can be had at the Rodono Hotel and at "Tibbie Shiels," a favourite "houf" of Christopher North, who has immortalised it in his "Noctes Ambrosianæ." The Yarrow water, which flows from St. Mary's Loch, and in its course receiving several burns, flows through the centre of a part of the parish, and forming a portion of its south-eastern boundary, leaves the parish and running through the centre of Selkirk parish joins the Ettrick about 2 miles south of that town. There are several mountains in the parish; the highest are Black Law, 2,285 feet; Blackhouse Heights, 2,213; Deer Law, 2,065; The Wise, 1,932; Minch Moor, 1,856, and Black Knowe, 1,806. The Duke of Buccleuch K.T. James Henry L'Estrange Johnstone, of Alva, and Herbert Constable Maxwell-Stuart esq. of Traquair, are the principal landowners. The area of the parish previous to the alteration of the boundary was 41,046 acres; rateable value, £9,663; population in 1881, 620, and in 1891, 638. Under the provisions of the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary orders 56 and 59, a part of Lyne and Megget parish in Peebles county has been transferred to this parish.

Megget, originally united with the parish of Lyne in Peebles-shire, was transferred by boundary order 56, under "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889," to this parish, but was left united to its former co-parish for ecclesiastical purposes; it lies north-west of St. Mary's Loch, and had in 1891 a population of 86.

THE SHETLAND ISLES

(OR COUNTY OF SHETLAND).

THE SHETLAND, or Zetland Isles, which form a county of Scotland, are above 100 in number, twenty-eight of which only are inhabited, forming a group or islands, islets and rocks, in the Northern Ocean, 44 miles west of Bergen, in Norway, lying between 50 degs. 48 mins. 30 secs. and 60 degs. 52 mins. north latitude, and between 1 deg. 52 secs. and 1 deg. 57 mins. west longitude from London. Fair Island, one of the Shetland group, lies 25 miles south of the other islands and half way to Orkney, Sumburgh Head, the southern point of Shetland, being 100 miles north-east from Duncansbay Head, the northern point of Caithness, and 52 north-east of Dennis Head, North Ronaldshay, the extreme north point of the Orkneys. There are three principal islands in the group, namely, Mainland, Yell (on the north), and (still further north-east) Unst; on the east of Yell lies Fetlar, which is the largest of the inferior islands, the lochs of which are famous for trout, and several of the other islands abound with seal, otter and wild fowl. The next island in point of size is Bressay; the smaller ones are Whalsay, Out Skerries, Samphray, Big Island, Mickle Roe, Papa Stour, House, Barray, Trondray, besides a great number of islets, holms and skerries. The highest land in these islands is Roeness Hill, which attains an elevation of 1,447 feet. The Hill of Foula is next in altitude,being about 1,300 feet above the level of the sea. The aggregate area is 551 square miles, or 352,889 acres. The population in 1891 was 12.190 males and 16,521 females, total, 28,711, against 29,705 in 1881, and the inhabited houses were 5,564 in 1891 and 5,544 in 1881.

Early History.—It seems probable that the Romans visited the coasts of Shetland, from the coins of that people which have been discovered—those of Galba, Vespasian, Trajan and Ælius Cæsar; and the remains of a small Roman camp are to be traced on the island of Fetlar. There seems to be little doubt these islands were first inhabited by the Scandinavians, the laws having been administered by "Udallers," who acted as a sort of petty princes, and under these chiefs and the Udal laws cultivated land was free of tax. In the year 875, Harold Harfager, or "The Fair-haired," subdued these islands, and gave them to Count Sigurd, who was the first Earl of Orkney, from whom sprang the true Norwegian dynasties of the Earls of Orkney and Shetland—the latter county being at first too insignificant to be included in the title, although it was included in the grant. On the cession of the Shetland Isles to the Scottish crown, the laws of the former were gradually encroached upon by the endeavours of the Scotch earls to introduce feudal subjection and seniorage in place of the ancient udal tenures. From 1468, when a marriage was concerted between the Scottish monarch, James III. and the Princess of Norway (when Orkney and Shetland were pledged to the royal husband), to the time when the two countries passed to the English crown, in the persons of Charles I. and II. and afterwards to the Earl of Morton (who sold the estate to Sir Lawrence Dundas), nothing occurs relating to the possession of Shetland that calls for any particular notice. Lord Robert Stuart, natural brother to Queen Mary, had a grant of the islands in 1565 and in 1581 was made justiciar, and in 1612 the islands were erected into a stewartry as Crown property.

Soil, Produce &c.—The general aspect is bleak and barren; and although there is but little to attract in the form of landscape in what may be called the interior of the islands—the whole of them being destitute of wood—their coast scenery presents views of a highly interesting character; and the tourist may here see wild scenery of diversified appearance and picturesque grandeur in the coast of Shetland. The peculiar breed of Shetland ponies are bred for exportation, and these small ponies, or "shelties" as they are called, traverse their way across the wastes without much difficulty. The cattle of Shetland are of a very diminutive breed, a cow weighing from two to three hundred weight upon an average; an ox from three to four, but seldom exceeding five hundred weight. A great abundance of poultry is kept on almost every farm, and small swine are numerous. The sheep are very small, but produce wool of an excellent quality, which is knitted into shawls, veils, stockings, gloves and mitts. Little attention is paid to agriculture, and the system of cultivation adopted is poor, the principal crops grown being oats, potatoes and turnips, the latter introduced early in the present century. The chief crops are oats, 7,266 acres; potatoes, 3,159; hay, 2,150; barley, 2,049; turnips, 1,290; the total corn crop being 45,180 acres; green crops, 4,889 acres; land under grass, 38,618 acres; permanent pasture, 39,714 acres; total area of land and water, 362,615, of which 283,883 acres are mountain and heath land; there are no woods or plantations; the live stock in 1894 comprised: horses, 5,344; cattle, 19,028; sheep, 101,413 and pigs 2,877. The fuel in general use is peat, the cutting and drying of which occupies diligent attention. The chief support of the Shetlander is dependent on the white fishery—herring, cod and ling abounding on the coasts; besides which many men and boys are employed every season in the Davis Straits whale fishing. Persons are also engaged in angling for the small fry of the coal fish or "gadus carbonarius"—known in Shetland by the name of "sethe." These, which swarm in myriads within the numerous creeks and sounds of this northern archipelago, first appear in May scarcely more than an inch long, and about August they become more abundant, measuring about eight inches in length, and in the early part of the following year they attain the ordinary size of the cod-fish. A profitable fishery then takes place in deep tide-ways, supplying the inhabitants with a portion of food and oil from the livers for light and other purposes. In 1894 there were 797 fishing boats registered at Lerwick under the "Sea Fisheries Act, 1868," with an aggregate tonnage of 7,164, and employing 2,928 hands in the boats and in connection with the fishery, besides 27 sailing vessels of 1,414 tons (aggregate).

The Shetland Isles, or county of Shetland, comprise 12 civil parishes, comprising 17 ecclesiastical parishes in two presbyteries and one synod. The only town in this northern group is Lerwick; besides it, there are only a few villages and hamlets on the shores, of which Scalloway is the largest. The islands now pay their proportion of the land tax, and in every other respect have become subject to British laws. They are represented in Parliament as in connection with the Orkneys, to which sheriffdom they belong.

BRESSAY is an island and parish, in Zetland poor combination and Lerwick small debt court district, separated from Lerwick, the capital of the islands, by the Sound of Bressay, length 6 miles, breadth, 1 to 3 miles. The original parish was Bressay, Burra and Quarff, but in 1830, Burra and Quarff was erected into a separate parish. In days before the Reformation, there were in Bressay three small churches or chapels, viz. St. Olla's at Gunnista, St. Mary's at Cullenshough, and St. John's at Kirkatister; the ruins of St. Olla's and St. Mary's still remain, and many curious old stones may be seen there. The parish church is a very old building and has been enlarged, and is now seated for 500 people; within the church may be seen two marble tablets in memory of members of the Cameron Mouat family: the church is at present (1895-6) undergoing extensive repairs and alterations. Bressay is well known for its bold and beautiful rock scenery, the most striking feature being the Isle of Noss, which lies due east of Bressay and is separated from it by a narrow and dangerous sound. The Noup of Noss is nearly 600 feet in height, and here innumerable birds of various kinds may be seen during the summer months, and grey eagles are occasionally found. One thing worth visiting is the "Holm of Noss," a small table-land lying on the south-west, detached from the main island by a sheer gulf of 65 feet. The island belongs to Miss A. Cameron Mouat, of Gardie House. Part is rented by the Marquess of Londonderry K.G. The area is 7,403 acres; rateable value, £1,190; the population in 1891 was 802.

Noss Island is included within this parish. Under the provisions of the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order No. 94, East Burra, Hevera, Holm of Papal, Papa, Quarff, Mainland and West Burra Islands have been transferred to Lerwick.

LERWICK.

LERWICK, the principal town in Shetland and the head of a poor combination, is (by steamer) 272 miles from Edinburgh, 200 from Aberdeen, 165 from Peterhead (Aberdeenshire), 126 from Wick, and 95 from Kirkwall, situate on the east coast of Mainland, or the largest island of the group. It bears the name of the bay upon whose margin it is built; and that, in its turn, derives its name from a long, narrow inlet on the opposite shore of the island of Bressay, called "Lera-voe," and remarkable for its extensive deposit of clay and mud; a projecting point at the entrance to "Lera voe" is called "Lera-ness;" and the whole bay, including the roadstead of Bressay sound, is named "Lerwick," which signifies the "bay of clay," or "mud"—compounded of Icelandic, leir, Danish, leir (clay, mud), and Suio-Gothic, wik, Danish, vig, viig (an arm of the sea, an anchorage). The site of the town, comprising a lunated segment of the sea shore of nearly half a mile in length, and becoming gradually more elevated as it recedes from the coast line, presents the appearance of a perfect amphitheatre, and, when viewed from the opposite anchorage, the effect is singularly picturesque. The principal street extends through the whole length of the town, following the curvature of the sea shore, and numerous lanes and closes, constructed at right angles with it, lead to a spacious road on the eminence above the town. By the "Lerwick Harbour Improvements Act, 1877," a road named the Esplanade was made along the shore, and extending nearly the whole length of the town, and a pier, 350 feet in length, constructed; both were completed in June, 1886; the total cost being £23,089. The houses are built of a species of grey sandstone, which abounds in the immediate vicinity, which is of great durability. The town is well supplied with water brought from Sandy Loch, about 2 miles above the town, in 1871, at a cost of £4,140, and at the same time sewerage works were constructed at a cost of £2,365. The harbour of Lerwick (or Bressay sound, as it is frequently called) is very spacious, and is bounded on the east by the island of Bressay, and on the west by Mainland, having an entrance from the south and another from the north. Its extent may be inferred from the fact that, on more than one occasion, a fleet of upwards of 90 war ships has anchored in it. Within the last few years a large herring fishing has been carried on, boats coming from the chief ports on the east coast of Scotland and also from the Isle of Man; the bulk of the herrings are salted and exported to the continental markets. The number of fishing boats registered in 1894 belonging to the port was 797, with a tonnage of 7,164, employing 2,928 men and boys. The number of vessels registered in the same year was 44, of 2,320 tons. Fort Charlotte stands on a rocky eminence at the northern extremity of the town, and commands the whole range of the anchorage, from the south to the north entrance of the harbour. It was originally built in the reign of Charles II.; but having been dismantled and allowed to fall into a state of dilapidation, it was rebuilt in 1781, and received the name it now bears in honour of the consort of George III. It is at present used as a training establishment for the Royal Naval Reserve. Lerwick is a burgh of barony, by charter dated 1818, and is now, under the provisions of the "Burgh Police (Scotland) Act, 1892," governed by twelve commissioners, including a provost and two bailies; by special provision of the Act, it has power to appoint its own police, separate from the county. The sheriff ordinary, debt recovery and small debt courts are held every Wednesday during the session. The justice of peace small debt court is held as occasion requires. The commissioners of supply and the provincial synod of Shetland also hold their meetings in Lerwick. The Town Hall was erected at a cost of about £5,500, the foundation stone being laid by H. R. H. the Duke of Edinburgh, 24th Jan. 1882. It is built in the Gothic and Scottish baronial styles, with Orkney freestone dressings, and was opened on the 12th of August, 1883. The architect was Mr. Alexander Ross, Inverness. In 1887, on the occasion of the Queen's jubilee, a clock and a fine peal of 8 bells, provided by subscription, were placed in the building, at a cost of about £600. Near the Town Hall are the County buildings, erected in 1875, containing sheriff court house and offices and county hall, and attached to these is the prison. The parish church, standing above the town, towards its southern extremity, is a building with a Doric front of hewn stone; but in consequence of the flatness of its roof, and the want of a spire, its external appearance is somewhat ponderous; internally, however, it is tastefully fitted up. The Shetland Literary and Scientific Society have a library and news room in Commercial street, which is open to the public; the library contains about 4,000 volumes. The Anderson Institute and the Widows' Asylum, the former erected in 1862 and the latter in 1865, are at the south end of the town. Both were founded by the late Arthur Anderson esq. a native of Shetland and founder of the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company, and who represented Orkney and Shetland in parliament during the session of 1847. The Institute, which consists of a higher school or academy and an elementary school, is now under the Lerwick school board. The Widows' Asylum, which was erected, and a Pension Fund provided for the indigent widows of fishermen etc. of Shetland, consists of twelve houses, containing from three to six rooms each. The poor house, erected outside the town at a cost of £5,000, contains 55 beds and is for the poor of the whole of the county. Adjacent is the hospital, built at an expenditure of £2,000, and containing 10 beds. Branches of the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, Union Bank of Scotland Limited and North of Scotland Bank Limited are established here. Two newspapers are published here weekly, the "Shetland News" and "Shetland Times." There are two first-class hotels, namely, the "Grand" and the "Queen's." A considerable portion of the produce of Shetland, consisting of fresh and salted fish, beef, oil, butter and hosiery, passes to market through the merchants of Lerwick; and, in like manner, by them are imported nearly all the groceries, spirits and manufactured goods used throughout the islands. Sheep and cattle sales are held every Monday during September, October and November, and the Shetland Agricultural Society hold their annual show here in August. The area of the civil parish previous to the alteration of the boundary was 5,653 acres; rateable value of present area, £13,632; the population in 1881 was 4,581, and in 1891 was 5,757 in the civil, 4,770 in the ecclesiastical, 3,783 in the police burgh and 3,930 in the town.

A public park was presented to the town in 1895 by an anonymous donor.

Quarff, Mainland, East and West Burra, Hevera, Holm of Papal and Papa Island, forming together the quoad sacra parish of Quarff, were on May 15, 1891, under the provisions of the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889," transferred from Bressay parish to Lerwick. Quarff is situated on Mainland, about 6 miles south-west from Lerwick. East and West Burra are small islands situated to the west of the mainland, from which they are separated by Clift sound, and are distant about 4 miles south from Scalloway. The area is 5,255 acres; rateable value included with Lerwick. The population in 1891 was, Quarff, 243; East Burra, 207; West Burra, 488; Hevera, 24; Holm of Papal, 2; Papa, 23; total, 987.

MAINLAND (sometimes called Shetland) is the largest island, and consists of the parishes of Delting, Dunrossness, Lerwick, Nesting, Northmavine, Sandsting, Tingwall and Walls (all of which see); its length from Fethaland Point at the northern extremity to Sumburgh Head at the southern, is 55 miles, and its breadth varies from 5 to 20 miles; the total area comprises about 240,000 acres; its form is irregular and the coast much indented; the narrow portion of the island begins at the south and runs north for 20 miles, when it projects westward, containing the parishes of Walls and Sandsting, the breadth becoming about 18 miles, after which, for about 10 miles, the width is reduced to 10 miles, and trends to the east, followed by a parish (Northmavine) of similar width, but 15 miles in length, projecting to the west; between these two westerly projections lies St. Magnus Bay, and to the east of the northern parish Yell Sound divides it from the island of that name. SCALLOWAY is a seaport village in the parish of Tingwall, 6½ miles from Lerwick, on the north side of a fine bay on the west side of Mainland. Anciently this was the capital of Shetland. Near the village are the ruins of Scalloway Castle, erected in 1600, by Patrick Stewart, Earl of Orkney and Shetland. Fishing is the chief industry, consisting principally of cod, ling, haddock and herring, and for facilitating this trade there are several quays, warehouses and cooperages. The men of Scalloway are of a fearless character, and frequently put to sea in such boisterous and stormy weather as would deter the most experienced and intrepid seamen of other quarters. Some have feued ground, and have erected houses for themselves. The village is well supplied with water, which is conveyed in pipes from the meadows above. On the west shore is a spring of excellent water, the flow from which is uninfluenced by the seasons, being constant and abundant; but it is covered by the sea at high water. There is a chapel of ease in the village, erected during the incumbency of the late Rev. John Turnbull. The population of the village in 1891 was 732

TINGWALL is a parish, composed of the islands of Hildesay, Langa, Linga, Oxna and Trondra, and the districts of Tingwall, Whiteness and Weisdale on Mainland, and in this portion is situated the large village of Scalloway; the parish is in the small debt court district of Lerwick and the poor combination of Zetland. There are Established churches at Tingwall and Whiteness villages, the former church having been rebuilt in 1805 on an ancient site at the head of a fresh water loch about 4 miles north of Scalloway. This locality, as its name implies, was at one time the place of meeting for the folkthing or great assembly of the people to pass laws &c. "Gallows Hill" is so called from its having formerly been the place of execution: the last who suffered on the spot are said to have been two females, who fell a sacrifice to superstition in the 17th century for the alleged crime of witchcraft. The area of the entire parish is 29,206 acres; rateable value, £4,806; the population of the parish in 1891 was 2,329, viz.: 230 on the islands and 2,099 on Mainland, of which the village of Scalloway contained 732; in 1881 the total was 2,385; 2,164 being on Mainland, including 648 in Scalloway.

UNST, the most northerly of the large islands, and separated from that of Yell by the Blue Mull Sound, is a parish which includes also the islands of Muckle Flugga and Uyea, and is in the small debt court district of Lerwick and the poor combination of Zetland; the extent of the larger island is 13 miles from north to south by 5 broad. At Cowlefield the juridical assemblies or folkthings were held; but these were afterwards removed to Tingwall on Mainland. Balta Sound, about the middle of the island, is, after Lerwick, the second chief station of the herring fishing in these islands, and at the head of Balta Sound is the House of Buness, the residence of Mrs. Edmonston: here, in 1817-8, Biot, the French philosopher, and Capt. Kater carried out their experiments in order to determine the variations in the length of the seconds pendulum, and there still exists in the grounds of Buness two stones used by Biot in his measurements. A rock on the coast has a natural arch or tunnel nearly 300 feet long, through which boats can pass. Haroldswick is a village a little north of Balta Sound. In 1817 chromate of iron was found in the vicinity of Buness. The island is well stocked with wild fowl. The area comprises 29,856 acres; rateable value, £3,758; the population of the entire parish was, in 1891, 2,280, and in 1881, 2,181, the smaller islands having only 11 inhabitants in 1891, and 8 in 1881.

STIRLINGSHIRE.

THIS is a midland county, marking the commencement of the Highlands, and is bounded on the south-west by Dumbartonshire, south by Lanarkshire and Linlithgowshire, on the west by Dumbartonshire, north by Perthshire and on the east by the very small county of Clackmannan and that of Linlithgowshire; from its position at the head of the Firth of Forth it is to some extent a seaboard county, Grangemouth having an extensive trade; its boundaries are in many places distinctly marked by water-courses or lakes—the principal boundary line on the north being the river Forth, the Avon on the east, the Kelvin river on the south, the Endrick water in the south-west, and Loch Lomond on the west. The figure of the county is extremely irregular; its length from east to west is 36 miles, but following the curvature of its form from east to its northern point, it will measure upwards of 45 miles; its breadth varies from 12 to 20 miles, except where it turns towards the north, and here the distance across is very trifling. The shire comprises an area of 447 square miles, or 286,338 acres. The population in 1891 comprised 63,060 males and 62,548 females, total, 125,608, and in 1881 the total was 112,443; the inhabited houses in 1891 were 24,689, and in 1881, 22,361. In size Stirling stands as twentieth, and in population as the ninth of the counties of Scotland.

Early History.—Originally part of the Pictish possessions, it appears to have passed under the Roman rule about A.D. 80, and they have left traces of their long occupation in camps &c. while the wall of Antoninus, which extends from the Clyde to the Forth, runs across the southern portion of the county. Abandoned by the Romans in 410 it again fell under the Pictish rule until they were expelled by the Saxons and Scots, and about 1060 it became more settled under Malcolm (Ceanmohr), though even then subject to Norman raids, while two centuries later Edward I. extended his forays thus far, capturing the castle of Stirling in 1296. The victory of Stirling Bridge by Wallace over the English in 1297, and a similar victory by Bruce, at Bannockburn, 24th June, 1314, checked the English for a time. James II. was born in Stirling castle, and in 1452 he stabbed the 8th Earl of Douglas in a small room in the same castle. In June, 1488, James fought his rebel nobles at Sauchiehall. In 1528 James V. having escaped from the dominion of Angus, the Regent, assumed control of affairs at Stirling, where he subsequently built the palace still existing in the castle. On 29 July, 1567, James VI. still an infant, was crowned at Stirling, and Murray (who was shot in 1570) assumed the regency; the noble who succeeded him in this office was killed in September, 1571, by a band of Mary's adherents who surprised the town, and in 1651 Charles II. started from Stirling on his expedition to England which terminated so disastrously at Worcester. In the 12th century David I. erected several religious houses, particularly that at Cambuskenneth, and these communities tended to civilize the rude manners of the inhabitants.

Surface, Soil, Produce, Minerals, Manufactures &c.—The part of the county which is adjacent to Loch Lomond, is a mountainous district; here Ben Lomond rises to the height of more than 3,192 feet. East from this the land becomes flat, or gently inclining towards the Forth, or the Endrick. In the centre of the county the ground is again elevated into a series of hills, of which those of the greatest altitude are from 1,300 to 1,500 feet high; from one of these, in Kilsyth parish, there is obtained a view computed to embrace an extent of 12,000 square miles. Many of the hills in the central, and more especially in the southern division, have their sides and even their summits clothed with a fine grass sward, which affords excellent pasturage for sheep. The eastern division of the county consists of carse land, in many places quite flat, and in others presenting a succession of inclined planes, gradually rising towards the south from the rich valley of the Forth. Almost every variety of soil to be met with in Scotland occurs in Stirlingshire; but the most common and the most fertile is the alluvial, or carse land, which occupies many thousand acres on the banks of the Forth. In this species of soil there are beds of shells, clay, marl and moss. In the western and central districts, on the banks of the rivers, the land is generally of a light and gravelly description; while patches of rich loam form the surface in other parts of the county. Large crops of oats, barley, beans, turnips potatoes &c. are raised, and the culture of artificial grasses has also been very generally adopted in this county. The extensive ranges of moor in the upland district are exclusively devoted to the feeding of sheep, which are of the old black-faced, or Highland breed; there are comparatively few cattle reared, the county being supplied from the Highlands. The chief crops are: oats, 18,965 acres; turnips, 4,521; barley, 3,765; potatoes, 3,253; beans, 3,039 and wheat, 1,819; the total corn crops being 27,637 and the total green crops, 8,339; the land under grass is 35,231 and permanent pastures, 45,726; total area of land and water, 296,928 acres, and mountain and heath land, 135,537 acres; the live stock in 1894 comprised: horses, 5,181; cattle 32,103; sheep, 127,631 and pigs, 2,520. The shire has a variety of mineral productions, the most abundant of which are coal, iron stone, limestone and sandstone. The principal coal pits are in the southern base of the Lennox Hills; but this valuable article is also obtained in the eastern district, in the vicinity of the Forth and Clyde canal, and in such quantities as not only to be sufficient for home consumption, but to admit of exportation. Ironstone, limestone and sandstone are found in the same districts with the coal. Veins of silver were discovered and wrought about a century ago, but the working of them was soon discontinued; copper, lead and cobalt have likewise been raised at different periods, but not to any considerable amount. The production of coal in 1894 was 1,421,882 tons, value £462,111; of fire clay 41,359 tons, value £6,720. There are four blast furnaces (half being in blast), but production is not returned. The production of oil shale was 2,497 tons and of stone 9,021 tons of gannister and 20,539 of limestone. The staple manufacture of this county is iron goods, both cast and malleable, the chief seat of which is at Carron, near Falkirk. The making of nails for carpenters' work is also carried on in several parishes (especially in that of Saint Ninians); at Saint Ninians are likewise manufactured tartans; at Stirling, carpets, tartans and shawls; and at Bannockburn tweeds are produced, while in other towns and localities are calico printing works, large distilleries, tanneries, breweries, chemical and other establishments. There is not much fishing, but Grangemouth had 54 vessels of an aggregate tonnage of 13,786, registered in 1894, and 2 steamers aggregating 2,341 tons were built there.

Rivers, Mountains and Railways.—The Forth is the principal river in Stirlingshire. It takes its rise from a spring near the summit of Ben Lomond, and, after receiving in its course the Teith, the Allan, and the Devon, expands into the estuary called the Firth of Forth. Between Stirling and Alloa, a distance of only 7 miles in a direct line, the stretch is more than 20 by the course of the river, owing to the numerous windings, which are termed "the links of the Forth." The next river in magnitude is the Carron, which has its source in the central district, and is navigable for vessels of large burthen for about 2 miles from the place where it forms a junction with the Forth. The other streams are the Avon, the Endrick, the Blank, and the Kelvin. Loch Lomond, a fine inland lake 23 miles in length by 5 in breadth at the widest part, to a little over 1 at the narrowest, extends from Balloch, 5 miles north of Dumbarton, to Ardlui, 2 miles south of Inverarnan, and contains several considerable islands, of which three principal ones, Inch Cruin, Inchfad, and Inchcaelloch, belong to this county, and a line drawn from the lake shore 1 mile west of Buchannan Kirk, to the centre of the Loch, and thence continued northward, passing to the east of Inchlonaig, up the middle of the Loch to a point just east of Inchvow, above Inversnaid, forms the western boundary of the county; there is some fishing and the Loch is much frequented by tourists in search of scenery. Ben Lomond lies to the east, about half way up the Loch, and the western side is skirted by large mountains for most of its length. The Forth and Clyde canal and the Union canal pass through the county; the first named debouching at Grangemouth and the Union joining it from Edinburgh, at Falkirk. There are also numerous springs, but the most noted are the Airthrey Wells, at Bridge of Allan, the waters of which contain saline and other properties. The eminences of great altitude above the level of the sea are: Ben Lomond, 3,262 feet; Ben a Choin, 2,524; Maol Mohr, 2,200; Ben Bhreare, 1,922; Ben Uird, 1,957; and Earls Seat, Campsie Fells, 1,894 feet. The railways running from Glasgow into the south of the county are the Alloa, Stirling and Perth branch of the North British line, which enters the county at Castlecary, and passing by Larbert and St. Ninians to Stirling, throwing out a branch to Alloa, where it joins the line of the same railway from Stirling, via Dunfermline, to Edinburgh; there is another line from Glasgow and Yoker, entering the county at Summerston and runs, via Kirkintilloch, to Kilsyth, from whence a branch goes to Bonnybridge, and over this the Caledonian line runs to Larbert; the North British railway has also a branch from Kirkintilloch running north-west, by Strathblane, to Gartness, where it joins the line from Stirling to Balloch and from this latter line nearer to Stirling runs a branch to Aberfoyle; the only other line is that running north and north-west from Stirling to Doune and Callander, by Bridge of Allan; this belongs to the Caledonian railway.

Divisions, Representation &c.—Stirlingshire comprises 23 complete parishes and 40 ecclesiastical parishes, in the synod of Perth and Stirling. It contains two parliamentary burghs—Stirling (which is the only royal burgh in the county), and Falkirk; the former joins with Culross, Queensferry, Dunfermline and Inverkeithing in returning a member to Parliament, and Falkirk is associated in representation with Linlithgow, Lanark, Airdrie and Hamilton. The county sends one representative. The parliamentary constituency in 1894-5 was 14,329. The valuation of the county for 1894-5 was £412,466, excluding railways, canals and tramways, which amounted to £127,486.

AIRTH is a parish, in the small debt court district of Falkirk, and is about 5 miles in length by about 1½ to 3 in breadth. The ancient village is on the banks of the Forth, nearly opposite to Kennetpans, with a station, 2 miles east on the Larbert and Alloa branch of the Caledonian railway, and is 27 miles west from Edinburgh, between 8 and 9 south-east from Stirling and 6 north-west from Falkirk. It was at one period a place of considerable importance, but is now greatly decayed. The Pow burn, a tributary of the Forth, runs through the centre of the parish. There are three small ports or harbours on the Forth, into which vessels of light burthen can enter, and two ferries across that estuary, at which are boats for the transport of cattle, carriages &c. to Alloa and other places on the Fife side. The salmon fishery is prosecuted here with considerable success. In the parish are three ancient towers, one at Airth, another at Dunmore and a third at Powfoulis; that at Airth is of very early date, and is called Wallace's Tower, from the circumstance of that hero having privily entered the building, slain the captain and one hundred men, and released his uncle who was a prisoner; the tower is still in tolerable preservation. Some years ago an anchor was found in Dunmore Hill, at least half a mile from the present course of the river. Airth Castle, the property of Col. Thomas P. Graham, is an elegant mansion in the pure Gothic style, and stands in a park about one mile long by half a mile wide. Powfoulis, the seat of Sir Thomas Dawson Brodie bart. D.L., J.P. is in this parish. Dunmore House, in a park about one mile long by half a mile wide, is the seat of Claud H. Hamilton esq. D.L., J.P. Col. T. P. Graham, who is lord of the manor, Claud H. Hamilton esq. D.L., J.P. Sir T. D. Brodie bart. John B. Sherriff esq. of Carronvale, The Carron Co. G. W. Stainton esq. of Belsdyke and C. E. Walker Ogilvie esq. of Pocknave, are the principal landowners. The whole parish, with the exception of the hills of Airth and Dunmore, is a level tract, and the soil rich and well cultivated. Acreage of parish, 5,477; rateable value, £9,760; population in 1881, 1,362, and in 1891, 1,325, of which the village contained 440.

ALVA, a parish, formerly connected judicially with this county and physically with Clackmannanshire, is now wholly situated in the latter county, where particulars will be found.

ARNPRIOR, see KIPPEN.

AVONBRIDGE, see SLAMANNAN.

BALDERNOCK, a parish (anciently Bathernock), in the southern extremity of the county and in the small debt court district of Lennoxtown. It is about 3½ miles long by 2½ broad, and is bounded by the river Kelvin and Allander on the side fronting north-east and by Campsie, and on the south-west lies the loch of Baldowie. The church is about 2 miles north-west from Balmore station, which is in the parish, on the Glasgow and Bonnybridge section of the North British railway, and 7 north from Glasgow. The parish abounds with cairns and similar memorials; the most remarkable of its antiquities is a structure denominated "the auld wife's lift," consisting of three stones, two of which are laid on the earth close by the side of each other, and on the top of this the third is placed in the same direction, with their ends pointed to the north and south; the whole is 18 feet in length by 11 in breadth and 7 in depth. In the surrounding grounds the roots and stumps of oak trees have been dug up, and there can be no doubt of this spot having once been a Druidic grove and place of sacrifice. Acreage of the parish, 4,322; population in 1881, 569, and in 1891, 553.

BALFRON is a parish in Stirling poor combination and small debt court district, and is about 11 miles in length and 3 in breadth; bounded on the east and south-east by Gargunnock and Fintry, on the south by the Endrick water, which separates it from Killearn, west by Drymen, and on the north by Buchlyvi and Kippen. The village stands on the declivity of a hill, and has a station 2 miles west on the Glasgow and Aberfoyle section of the North British railway. The village is supplied with water from a spring on Spittal farm, the works of which cost £800. On the site of the old parish school has been erected a commodious public school, with a dwelling house for the master; the school will hold about 250 children, and is under the charge of one of the few remaining schoolmasters appointed by the heritors prior to the passing of the Education Act. A branch of the British Linen Co. Bank is in the village. The annual fair is held on the last Tuesday in May. Acreage of the parish, 7,820; rateable value, £6,777; population in 1881, 1,327, and in 1891, 1,203, of which the village contained 885.

BANNOCKBURN is a manufacturing town and quoad sacra parish erected from the civil parish of St. Ninians, 1 mile from that place, on the road from Falkirk to Stirling, and on both sides, but chiefly on the east bank, of the Bannockburn rivulet, which here runs through a glen, and after a course of a few miles falls into the Forth. It has a station half a mile east on the Glasgow and Stirling section of the North British railway, and is 3 miles south from Stirling and 8 north from Falkirk. Few places of its size in Scotland have more rapidly improved of late years, in consequence of the manufactures that have taken their seat here; these consist of tweeds, tartans, and carpets to a considerable extent. Coal is obtained in the vicinity in great abundance, and a tannery has been established in the village for a long period. In this district the country is characterised by long descending braes, with a northern exposure to the Firth of Forth, and it was on one of these uplands, between this village and that of St. Ninians, that was fought, on the 24th June, 1314, the memorable and decisive battle of Bannockburn; the result of which was the permanent security of the independence of Scotland. In this conflict the army of the English, under Edward II. and the Earls of Pembroke and Gloucester, numbering about 100,000 men, attempted to relieve Stirling Castle, then besieged by Robert Bruce, but was defeated with heavy loss, although the Scots numbered considerably less. Bruce's forces were stationed along the front of an eminence called Gillies Hill, and extended from south-west to north-east, between the farm of Greysteil and the village of St. Ninians. About half a mile south from the latter, upon the summit of a commanding elevation called Calden Hill, is a large stone, termed the "Bored Stone," having a hole in the top in which the Scottish king inserted his standard on the day of battle. The height called the Cat Craig Hill, from which the English king watched the progress of the battle, has been almost quarried away. About half a mile from the town of Bannockburn, at Milton, is pointed out the remains of the miller's house to which James III. retreated from the battle of Sauchieburn, fought in 1488, about 2 miles further to the south-west. There is a Public Hall in the village, erected at a cost of £1,700. Two fairs are held in Bannockburn—on the second Tuesday in June and October (old style). Bannockburn contained a population in 1881 of 4,331, and in 1891, 2,765, of which the town contained 2,000

BONNYBRIDGE is a town of considerable importance and has become so within the last twenty-five years. It is on the Bonny water and Forth and Clyde canal, and has two railway stations, one belonging to the Caledonian, the other to the Caledonian and North British Companies jointly, and within a radius of a mile are two other stations, one called the High station and the other Greenhill junction. The village is 4 miles west from Falkirk, 9 south from Stirling and 17 north-west from Glasgow. Bonnybridge was converted into a quoad sacra parish in 1878, from Denny, Dunipace and Falkirk civil parishes. Several industries have been established, the chief being the foundry of Smith and Wellstood Lim. on the banks of the Forth and Clyde canal, celebrated for the manufacture of light and ornamental castings and American stoves; the other leading trades are Oswald and Hall's paper mills, five brick works, two saw mills, grain mills, a chemical works and collieries. The Established church is a plain stone edifice, erected in 1878, and has about 600 sittings. There is a large public hall in the village. The population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1891 was 3,111, and of the town, 1,243.

BRIDGE OF ALLAN is a popular watering place on the river Allan, about 1½ miles from its confluence with the Forth, and nearly at the western extremity of the Ochill hills. It is a police-burgh and quoad sacra parish erected from Logie civil parish, and has a station on the Oban and Stirling section of the Caledonian railway, and is 1½ miles north from Causewayhead station, which is in the parish, on the Stirling and Edinburgh line of the North British railway, and is 3 north from Stirling, 13 north-by-west from Falkirk, and about 8 north-west from Alloa. The bridge from which the town takes its name connects the parishes of Logie and Lecropt at the confluence of the Allan and the Teith. The higher part of the town in the neighbourhood of the wells and Coneyhill is of considerable elevation, forming a terrace or plateau, on which many villas are erected, the sloping sides of the hill, adorned with trees, commanding a series of views, including Stirling, its castle and carse, watered by the Forth, Teith and Allan, with other objects of interest. Numerous improvements were made by the late Major J. Alexander Henderson, of Westerton, on whose estate a considerable portion of the town is erected. It is resorted to by persons as well for pleasure as for restoration of health, on account of the mildness of the climate, the beauty of the surrounding scenery, and the fame of its saline mineral waters, which are at Airthrey, 3 miles from Stirling, and a few minutes' walk from the town; they are the chief saline waters in Scotland, and contain 47½ grains of common salt in 16oz. and nearly a similar amount of muriate of lime. Prior to the discovery of these springs, the place was comparatively little known, but now consists of well-built houses and tasteful villas, with several hotels, including the Hydropathic Establishment, the Royal Hotel, the Queen's Hotel and Carmichael's Temperance Hotel. In the burgh are reading rooms, a library, the M'Farlane gallery of sculpture and pictures, two bowling greens, Keir Gardens, the seat of the late Sir William Stirling Maxwell, which are open once a week to the public, and several miles of good angling. The "Strathallan Meeting" is held annually on the first Saturday of August, in the public park, at the east end of the village. The above meeting for Scottish athletic games is pre-eminently the first in Scotland. In 1871, Bridge of Allan was made a burgh under the provisions of the Lindsay Act. Its municipal affairs are managed by nine commissioners, who (from their own number) elect a provost and two bailies under the Burgh Police (Scotland) Act, 1892. Among the business establishments are large bleaching and dye works, and a paper manufactory. The lords of the manor are the trustees of the late Sir James E. Alexander and Donald Graham esq. C.I.E. of Airthrey Castle. The area has not been ascertained since the reconstruction of the parish boundaries of Lecropt and Logie; rateable value of the burgh, £21,922 19s. 4d.; population of Bridge of Allan in 1881, 3,005, and in 1891, 3,207; ecclesiastical population in 1891, 2,690.

NORTH BROOMAGE, see LARBERT.

BUCHANAN is a parish, in Dumbarton poor combination and the small debt court district of Stirling; it is about 19 miles in length by 2 to 5 in breadth, lying on the western extremity of the county and is mountainous; it is bounded by Dumbartonshire and Perthshire and Drymen parish on the north, Loch Lomond on the west, by the river Endrick on the south, and by Drymen on the east. The river Forth rises in the district, at the back of Ben Lomond, and the Endrick waters intersect the parish. Lake Arket, about one mile long by half a mile wide, is in the northern extremity of the parish, and from it flows the Arklet water into Loch Lomond. The church is about 4 miles north-west from Drymen station on the Stirling and Balloch section of the North British railway, 12 north from Dumbarton and 24 west-by-south from Stirling. Loch Lomond is a large inland lake, 23 miles long by 5 broad at its widest part, and one at its narrowest point. The boundary line between the counties of Stirling and Dumbarton commences at the lake shore about one mile west of Buchanan kirk to the centre of the loch, and thence continues northwards to the west of Inchruin Island, up the centre of the loch to a point just east of Vow Island. There are several islands in the lake, of which Inchcailloch, Inchfad and Inchruin are included in Stirlingshire boundary. At Rowardennan is a ferry to Inveruglas, in Dumbartonshire. There are several mountains in the parish, including Ben Lomond, 3,192 feet high, Ben a Choin, 2,524 feet, Ptarmigan, 2,398 feet, Mael Mor, 2,249 feet, Cruinn a Bheinn, 2,077 feet, and Ben Uird, 1,957 feet. Rob Roy's cave and prison are both in this parish. The Montrose Home, opened by the Duchess of Montrose in May, 1891, is at Balmaha, on the borders of Loch Lomond: the institution, the cost of which was entirely defrayed by the duchess, is in connection with the Evangelistic Institute of Glasgow, and will hold 30 poor children,who are boarded for two weeks. Buchanan Castle, which occupies the site of the old residence destroyed by fire in 1850, is the seat of His Grace the Duke of Montrose

K.T. lord lieutenant of the county, and stands on the margin of Loch Lomond and the Fort of Inversnaid, near the head of the loch, and is surrounded by a large park. The castle obtained its present name from having, prior to 1682, when it was purchased by the Montrose family, belonged to the Buchanans. Acreage of the parish, 41,598; rateable value, £7,545; population in 1881, 550, and in 1891, 658.

BUCHLYVIE is a village and quoad sacra parish, erected from Kippen and Drymen civil parishes, in Stirling small debt court district. The village is on the road from Stirling to Dumbarton, and has a station, 1 mile north, on the Stirling and Balloch section of the North British railway, and is also the junction of the Aberfoyle branch; it is 14 miles west from Stirling and 19 north from Glasgow. From Port of Monteith station, which is in the parish and on the same railway, the tourist may proceed to the lake of Monteith, in Perthshire, in which are situated the islands of Inchnahome and Falla, on the former of which are the ruins of a large monastery, founded by King Egbert, in 825. Many historical associations are connected with the place, among which may be mentioned that Queen Mary retired thither after the battle of Pinkie (1547), and planted a box-wood bower, a part of which still remains. It was here that Sir Walter Scott conceived the idea of writing his "Lady of the Lake." Ardgibbon Glen, much frequented for the grandeur of the scenery, is in the neighbourhood. Population in 1881, 319, and in 1891, 806 in the ecclesiastical parish and 313 in the village.

CAMELON is a quoad sacra parish, formed in 1852, from Falkirk civil parish, in Falkirk small debt court district. It is on the road from Falkirk to Stirling and the Forth and Clyde canal, and consists principally of one street, about 1 mile west from Falkirk station on the Glasgow and Linlithgow section of the North British railway, and 2 west from Grahamston station on the Larbert and Grangemouth branch of the Caledonian railway. The parish church is a plain stone edifice, built in 1839, and has about 600 sittings. In the vicinity there are four foundries and extensive chemical works. Camelon is a place of considerable interest to the antiquarian, having been represented by the early writers as a maritime city, in corroboration of which assertion fragments of anchors blocks of stone with rings attached, and even an entire boat of ancient model, have been found embedded in the soil. The city, it is alleged, was built by Vespasian, and when subsequently possessed by the Picts had twelve brazen gates: no vestige, however, of this magnificent place remains except one portion of a wall, visible from the Glasgow road. The sea is now about 4 miles distant. The population in 1891 was 3,332.

On its most elevated ridge, and almost perpendicularly over the village, stands the Wallace monument, in the form of a Scotch baronial tower, surmounted by a crown, and 220 feet in height, erected from designs by Mr. Rochead, of Glasgow. DENNY is a police burgh, thriving town and parish in Stirling poor combination and small debt court district. The extent of the parish is about 6 miles long, by an average of 4 in breadth, bounded on the south-west by the parish of Kilsyth, and on the west and north by the Carron, and south-east by Falkirk. The town is on the road directly west from Falkirk, through the centre of the county, the road from Stirling to Glasgow also passing through, and is 29 miles west from Edinburgh, 20 north-east from Glasgow, 7 south from Stirling, and 5 west from Falkirk. The Denny railway, opened in 1859, is a branch of the Scottish Central section of the Caledonian line, which joins the main line at Larbert, nearly 4 miles distant. The terminus is close to the town, from which run two sub-branches extending to the iron mines in the neighbourhood, by which the ironstone is conveyed to works near Coatbridge, and the coal to Glasgow and Grangemouth for shipment over the country generally, and near here is the Forth and Clyde canal. There is a hall where the Oddfellows' lodge and public meetings are held, and lodges of the Ancient Order of Foresters, the Free Gardeners, and Freemasons and a People's Club and Reading Room. The uncommon extent of the water power, as well as the purity of the Carron, have caused the establishment of considerable works on its margin, comprising paper and dyewood mills and chemical works, and in the district are extensive coal and iron mines, the whole furnishing employment to a large population. Two fairs are held annually, one on the Wednesday before the 12th May, the other on the Wednesday after the 11th of November. Places of interest in the neighbourhood are the Hermitage, Carron Glen, the ruins of Torwood Castle and Lady's Leap. The banks of the Carron were the scene of many of the most interesting and heroic deeds recorded in Scottish history. Banknock House is the residence of William Turner esq. Wiliam Forbes esq. D.L., J.P. of Callendar, is the principal landowner. Acreage of the parish, 8,309; population in 1881, 5,723, and in 1891, 6,373; of the latter number the burgh of Denny and Dunipace contained 4,161; the population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1891 was 3,842.

Haggs is a quoad sacra parish and village in the south of this parish, 2½ miles west from Bonnybridge, 1½ west of Denny Loanhead, and 1 mile north of the Banknock station (which is in the parish) on the Glasgow and Bonnybridge section of the North British railway. The Established church is a stone structure in the Gothic style, with a turret containing one bell, and will seat about 600. The population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1891 was 1,660.

Bankier is a hamlet at the west end of the parish, and contains a distillery.

At Holland Bush, near Haggs, was fought the battle of Kilsyth on 15th August, 1645, in which Montrose defeated the Covenanters. The population of Holland Bush and Haggs village in 1891 was 623.

Parkfoot and Longcroft is a village 2½ miles south-west from the village of Denny; its population in 1891 was 588.

DRYMEN is a parish in Dumbarton poor combination and Stirling small debt court district. It is 12 miles long and 3 broad in the south and 12 in the north, and is bounded on the north by Aberfoyle, in Perthshire, on the east by Kippen, Balfron and Killearn, on the south by Killearn, Kilmaronock and Dumbarton, south by Dumbartonshire, and on the west by Buchanan. The village, on the road from Stirling to Dumbarton, is about 1 mile north from the Endrick water, which flows into Loch Lomond, and is 17 miles north-north-west from Glasgow. Drymen station, on the Stirling and Balloch section of the North British railway, is 1½ miles south of the village, in Dumbartonshire. A branch of the Royal Bank of Scotland is located in the village. Fairs for cattle are held on the last Wednesday in April (old style) and 17th May (new style). On the side of Loch Lomond, near Drymen, John Napier, lord of the free barony of Merchiston and the inventor of logarithms, resided for a considerable time; he died 6 April, 1617. Duchrey Castle is the residence of J. C. Bolton esq. Acreage of the parish, 30,850; rateable value, £28,855; population in 1881, 1,431, and in 1891, 1,512, and in the ecclesiastical parish, 789.

At Gartness, about 2½ miles south-east from Drymen, is a fall of water of about 12 feet tumbling over a rock, which the salmon when going up the river clear by a leap. Near the village are two factories for woollen cloth and felting. There is a station here on the Forth and Clyde section of the North British railway. Population returned with Drymen.

DUNIPACE is a parish, divided into the four districts of Little Denovan, Meikle Denovan, Dunipace and Torwood, in Stirling small debt court district and Larbert ecclesiastical parish, and is bounded on the north and west by the parish of St. Ninians, on the east by Larbert and on the south by the river Carron, which divides it from Denny. The town is on the road from Stirling to Glasgow and Falkirk, about 1 mile north from Denny terminal station from Larbert on the Glasgow and Stirling section of the Caledonian railway, 7 south from Stirling and 6 north-west from Falkirk. Dunipace is included in the police burgh of Denny. This parish is rich in minerals, and has an extended line of the Denny branch mineral railway, crossing the river Carron, which divides this and the adjoining parish of Denny, extending to the mines, which give employment, with the other works, to the inhabitants of this district. This locality is rendered famous in the works of most Scottish topographers, from possessing two mounts called "the Hills of Dunipace," the origin of which, or the purposes to which they were devoted, have stimulated research. The traditionary account is that they were erected as monuments of a peace concluded on their site between the Romans and the Caledonians; but there are strong reasons for presuming that they are sepulchral memorials. It was at Dunipace that Edward I. of England, on the 14th of October, 1301, signed a warrant to his ambassadors, then in France, authorising them to consent to a truce with the Scots as an indispensable preliminary towards a peace with their ally the French king, between whom and Edward a destructive war had long been waged. John C. Bolton esq. of Carbrook and John A. Harvie-Brown esq. of Dunipace, are the principal landowners. Acreage of the parish, 5,586; population in 1881, 1,874, and in 1891, 1,716 and of the town, 1,078.

FALKIRK.

FALKIRK is an ancient town, parliamentary and police burgh, the principal town of the eastern district of the county, and a parish and the head of a poor combination; the extreme length of the parish is 9 miles, and its breadth from 2 to 5½; it is bounded on the north by Denny and Larbert, on the south by Slamannan and Muiravonside, on the east by Polmont, and on the west by Dumbartonshire. Falkirk has a station on the Edinburgh and Glasgow section of the North British railway, also one at Grahamston, which is used for the town, on the same line, and one on the Caledonian railway. The town is 24 miles west-by-north from Edinburgh, 22 north-east from Glasgow, 11 south-south-east from Stirling, and 3 south-west from Grangemouth, and is situated on the face of an eminence, overlooking the broad expanse of country called "the Carse (or Kerse) of Falkirk," and commanding a most extensive prospect. The views comprise (besides the rich and fertile "carse," which is well cultivated and interspersed with villages and several gentlemen's seats), the river Forth, the great canal, which intersects the country about half a mile north of the town; while to the south it is bounded by Callander wood, shrouding a rising ground a short distance from the town, which consists of (excluding a number of back streets and lanes, or wynds) one principal street, which is long and irregular. In general the houses are built of hewn stone. A number of small villas are situated towards the north of the town; they form a street, about half a mile in length, uniting to the town Grahamston and Bainsford, and thereby forming a continuous line upwards of a mile in extent.

The port of Grangemouth, about 3 miles to the north-east of Falkirk, is connected with the burgh by a railway, formed by the Caledonian Railway Company.

The Union canal joins the Forth and Clyde canal about a mile west from the town, but its trade is limited, it having been purchased by the Edinburgh and Glasgow Railway Company. About half a mile south of the town it passes through a tunnel 796 yards in length.

The Falkirk and Larbert Water Trust introduced in 1890 a supply of water from the Denny Hills, at a cost of about £30,000.

The town is lighted with gas supplied by the Gas Commission, who purchased the works in February, 1895, from a private company.

Falkirk was created a burgh of barony in the reign of James I. afterwards a burgh of regality in the reign of Charles I. but no baron bailie has been appointed for many years. A body of "stent masters," chosen by the different trades of the town, formerly managed its affairs, but that body being abolished by Act of Parliament, their powers and property were transferred to the magistrates. The town is governed by a provost, three bailies, and eight councillors. This body first came into existence in 1833, and under the "Falkirk Police and Improvement Act," the magistrates assess the inhabitants for police and improvement purposes.

Falkirk, with Airdrie, Hamilton, Lanark and Linlithgow, form a parliamentary district of burghs returning one member.

Justice of peace courts and petty sessions are held as occasion requires. A sheriff court was first opened at Falkirk in 1834, for the eastern district of the county, comprising the parishes of Falkirk, Polmont, Muiravonside, Slamannan, Larbert, Bothkennar and Airth.

The old church of Falkirk is believed to have been founded by St. Modan, and, with the church of Dunfermline, is considered to be one of the oldest establishments on record erected on the mainland of Scotland for public worship. The name of the town owes its origin to the church, and the Highlanders still call it by the old Celtic name of "Eglaise Bhreac," or spotted church, which is synonymous with the old Saxon name "Fawkirk," bearing the same meaning. The former church was taken down in 1810, and a new one erected on its site, but the tower connected with the ancient structure was, however, permitted to retain its position. The ancient form of the church has been reproduced—under the superintendence of Mr. George Watson, with the Rev. Dr. Anderson, Edinburgh; the south aisle, taken down in 1810, formerly in the possession of the Knights of St. John of Jerusalem, and endowed by them, being rebuilt, along with the east and west aisles. These additional buildings, with other rooms in the tower, are used for sabbath school and other church purposes. The cost of these alterations, including a new organ, was about £4,000. The Kirk Session Records, which extend as far back as 1617, mention the fact that a marble tablet, which is now inserted in the tower, was found when the old church was taken down. It bears the following inscription:

FVNDATVM
MALCOLMO III.
REGE SCOTIÆ.
AM † 1057.

In the churchyard lie the remains of Sir John de Græhame (the friend of Wallace), and Sir John Stuart, who were slain on the memorable field of Falkirk, in 1298; a plain coffin-shaped stone marks the grave of the latter, and the Marquess of Bute has erected a granite cross to the west of the church, to the memory of the men of Bute who were slain with their chief, Sir John Stuart. There is also a monument to Sir John de Græme, surrounded by a railing, surmounted by a Gothic cupola. A bronze casting of the two-handed sword used by this hero has been affixed to the tomb. In the same cemetery stands the monument to two officers, Sir Robert Munro, of Foulis, and his brother, Dr. Munro, who fell in the second battle of Falkirk, between the forces of the Pretender and the Duke of Cumberland, January 17th, 1746. A monument, erected by Robert Dollar esq. of San Francisco, a native of Falkirk, "to the memory of William Edmondston, of Cambus Wallace, Captain-Lieutenant of the 17th Regiment of Foot, who fell in battle near Falkirk, 27th January, 1746." Another slab bearing an inscription has been inserted, in memory of Mr. Dollar's mother, who was buried in the same grave.

The Free church, in Garrison place, is now (1896) replaced by a new edifice in Newmarket street; the building, which is of Dumfries red freestone, is in the Gothic style, surmounted with a spire, and when completed will seat 1,040; the estimated cost is £8,000.

All the burial grounds being closed by order of the sheriff, a cemetery has been provided for the entire parish; it embraces an area of 11 acres, and is about a mile west of the town. There are several public schools and one or two private ones.

The County Buildings, erected in 1868, in lieu of the old court house, are in Hope street; the building includes court rooms for the sheriff and justices, and procurator's hall, in which the County Council for the Eastern Division of Stirlingshire hold their meetings. At the same time a prison and county police office were built. Burgh buildings were erected in Newmarket street in 1878.

In the year 1859 an Exchange, or Corn Market, was built on the north side of the parish church; this was replaced by the present hall in 1878. The Corn market is now held in Neilson's Auction Mart.

Falkirk is within a very populous district, with no large town in the immediate neighbourhood, and commands an extensive inland trade, and the various iron and other works (from which the town derives material support) render it the market town for between 50 and 60 thousand people. The principal trade of the town is tanning and currying, the making of fire bricks and tiles, with a distillery, a brewery, and several chemical works.

In the parish there are the Falkirk Iron Works, the Gowan Bank Iron Works, the Grahamston Iron Company's Works, the Burnbank Iron Works, the Etna Iron Works, the Parkhouse Iron Works, Camelon Iron Works, Salton Iron Works, the Callendar Iron Works, Abbots Iron Works, the Springfield Iron Works, and about 1 mile to the west are the Port Downie Iron Works, the Sunnyside Iron Company's Works and the Forth and Clyde Iron Works. There are various coal mines in the vicinity, and extensive timber yards.

The market for grain is held on Thursday.

Seven fairs are annually held for cattle and horses, namely—the last Thursday in January, the first Thursday in March, the third Thursday in May, the second Thursday in June, the second Thursday in July, the third Thursday in August, and the first Thursday in November; besides two days for hiring servants (the first Thursday in April, and the last Thursday in October), called feeing Thursdays, which are numerously attended.

The three Falkirk trysts, which are large cattle markets, are held at Stenhousemuir on the second Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday in August, September and October.

There are branches of the Bank of Scotland, the Clydesdale Bank Limited, Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, National Bank of Scotland Limited, Royal Bank of Scotland and British Linen Company Bank and a Savings Bank in the town.

In the town is a steeple 146 feet high, in which are 2 bells and a clock; immediately to the west of the steeple an equestrian statue of the great Duke of Wellington was erected in 1854 by public subscription.

Falkirk is historically famous as being the scene of two memorable battles, the first, July 22, 1298, between Edward I. of England and the Scots, under Sir William Wallace, was fought on the level ground to the north of the town, and, mainly through the havoc created by the English archers, resulted in the total defeat of the Scots and sealed the fate of Wallace, who never recovered his position and was ultimately executed (1305); the second conflict took place Jan. 17, 1746, on high ground south-west of the town, between the young Pretender, Prince Charles Edward, and the English forces under General Hawley, who was defeated with the loss of guns and baggage and retreated into Falkirk, thence to Linlithgow and Edinburgh.

Near the canal, standing in a small park, is Kerse House, the seat of the Marquess of Zetland P.C., D.L., J.P. William Forbes esq. D.L., J.P. of Callendar, James Wilson esq. of Bantaskine, representatives of the late John Wilson, of South Bantaskine, and the Marquess of Zetland are the principal landowners.

The area of the entire civil parish is 19,551 acres; rateable value, £135,778; the population of the parish in 1881 was 25,143, and in 1891, as follows:—

Bonnybridge Town (part of)	1,243
Falkirk Burgh (Parliamentary, not Royal)	16,620
Falkirk Burgh (Municipal, beyond Parliamentary)	692
Falkirk Suburban	2,456
Falkirk Shipping	1
Grangemouth Town (part of)	3,976
Grangemouth Shipping	27
Landward	5,716
Total	30,731

In 1891 the populations were: town, 19,769; police burgh, 17,312; ecclesiastical parish, 14,506.

Grahamston is a quoad sacra parish in the burgh of Falkirk, only being separated therefrom by the line of the Caledonian Railway Co. The population in 1891 was 6,624.

Bainsford is small village in Falkirk parish, 1 mile from the town hall, on the Larbert high road.

Laurieston (or Lawriestoun) is a village in the parish of Falkirk, about 1 mile east from that town. Nail making, which was formerly carried on to a considerable extent, is now almost extinct. This place was originally called Langtoun, afterwards Merchiston, and is now named Laurieston, in honour of the late Sir Lawrence Dundas, who made considerable additions to and much improved it. The population in 1891 was 1,725.

FINTRY is a parish, in the small debt court district of Stirling, and extends from east to west 6 miles, and in breadth, from north to south, averages about 5 miles, bounded on the north by Balfron and Gargunnock, on the east by St. Ninians and Kilsyth, on the south by Campsie and on the west by Killearn. The village is 7 miles west from Balfron station on the Stirling and Balloch section of the North British railway, and 8 north from the Lennoxtown station on the Glasgow and Aberfoyle line of the same railway, 41 west from Edinburgh, 16 west-south-west from Stirling and 18 north from Glasgow; it is pleasantly situated north of the Campsie Fells. Both the Endrick and the Carron rivers have their source in this district, and in their course through it form several romantic falls, among which is the Loup of Fintry, a cataract of the Endrick descending 91 feet; and on the Carron is another, about 112 feet, called the "Auchinlily Linn Spout." Near the village of Fintry is a hill called the "Doon," on which is a range of perpendicular basaltic columns, some 50 feet in length; among them may be observed several without any joints. Bin Mountain, 1,870 feet high, and Stroned, 1,676 feet, are in the parish. Culcreach and Craigton are the seats of James Cameron Dun Waters esq. The Duke of Montrose and James Cameron Dun Waters esq. are the principal landowners. Acreage of the parish, 13,772; population in 1881, 414, and in 1891, 357.

GRANGEMOUTH.

THIS is a police burgh and seaport, 3 miles north from Falkirk, 27 north-north-west from Edinburgh and 25 north-east from Glasgow, situated on the Firth of Forth, at the junction of the river Carron with the Clyde and Forth canal, and is governed by a provost, two bailies and six commissioners. The ecclesiastical parish was erected from the parishes of Bothkenna, Falkirk and Polmont. A branch railway, which joins the North British at Falkirk, was formed in 1859, thus putting the port in connection with the railway system of the country. The Caledonian Railway Company have also a branch line, which joins the Scottish Central section at Larbert. This port was commenced in 1777 by Sir Lawrence Dundas, for the shipping passing through the canal to and from the Clyde and Glasgow, of which it is the natural eastern port: its growth is attributable to the moderate rate of charges, as well as to the facilities for vessels of the largest tonnage: the canal rates of toll are also low: the wet dock, opened in 1843, affording room for nearly 20,000 tons of shipping, being found too small for the trade, additional dock accommodation was added. New docks were opened on the 3rd of June, 1882, on nearly 60 acres, and 19½ of this is the water area of these docks and timber basins, the actual dockage area being about 10½ acres: the arrivals for 1893 were 2,808, with a registered tonnage of 1,079,297, and the returns of 1894 were—arrivals, 2,579, with a registered tonnage of 997,625, but the year's trade was greatly affected by the coal strike of that year. The number of vessels registered as belonging to the port in 1894 was 54, with a tonnage of 13,786. There are commodious quays, granaries and warehouses; also shipbuilding yards, a graving dock and timber yards. Rope and sail making is extensively carried on, and there are saw mills and large collieries adjacent. The imports from Norway, Denmark, America, Prussia and the Baltic in general, are timber, grain, flax &c. A considerable coasting trade is also done. Steamers ply regularly to and from London, Rotterdam, Hamburg, Stettin, Dunkirk, Copenhagen, Middlesbrough &c. The advantages and cheapness of the port, and the readiness of communication by canal and railway with the populous manufacturing districts, and with inexhaustible supplies of iron and coal, combine to invest Grangemouth with great advantages for the above imports and of other continental produce, as well as for the export of the mineral and other productions of the west of Scotland. The Town Hall, erected at a cost of about £5,500, has a large hall capable of seating 900 persons: there are also included in the building town clerk's chambers, council room and small halls for meetings of committees. The town having adopted the Free Libraries Act, the Victoria Library was erected in 1887, at a cost of about £1,800, including site, one half of the sum being presented by Mrs. Carnegie, the other being raised by voluntary contributions and assessment. The Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited and the Bank of Scotland have branches here. On the same date as the opening of the docks, a new park, which covers 8½ acres, granted by the Marquess of Zetland, was opened. The population of Grangemouth town and ecclesiastical parish in 1881 was 4,424, and in 1891, 6,354, and of the police burgh, 5,833.

KILLEARN is a parish, in Stirling poor combination and small debt court district, and is 12 miles long by an average breadth of 2½, the river Endrick, with the parish of Balfron, forming its northern boundary. It is bounded on the east by Fintry, on the south by Strathblane and Dumbartonshire, and on the west by Drymen, in Dumbartonshire. The land is fertile, and is watered by the Endrick and the Blane. The village is almost in the centre of the parish, in a pleasant part of the country, and has two stations, one called the Old, about 1 mile south-west, and other the New, 2 west, on the Glasgow and Aberfoyle section of the North British railway, 30 miles west from Edinburgh, 20 south-west from Stirling, and nearly 17 north-by-west from Glasgow. The village is supplied with water by Alexander Buchanan esq. The church, a handsome structure, was built by the late Sir Archibald Orr-Ewing bart. of Ballikilrain, in memory of his daughter, at a cost of £8,000, and presented to the parish. The old church is now used as a public hall. The minerals in the district are chiefly limestone and freestone, and beautiful specimens of jasper are occasionally met with among the fragments of basaltic columns which abound here. The woods produce great numbers of indigenous plants. Considerable interest is attached to this part of the country as having been the birthplace or residence of men eminent in the biography of Scotland. In its more secluded recesses, Sir William Wallace was known to have occasionally found a retreat. It has an additional claim to the attention of the literary world, from being indisputably the birthplace, in 1506, of George Buchanan, the celebrated poet and historian, tutor to James VI. and principal of St. Leonard's College, St. Andrews; his "History of Scotland" appeared in 1582, and in December in that year he died: he was born at a place called The Moss, a small farmhouse on the bank of the Water of Blane, about two miles from the village of Killearn: the farm was the property of the author's father, and was for a long period possessed by persons of the name of Buchanan: a beautiful monument of white freestone was erected in the village in 1788 to his memory, consisting of an obelisk, 19 feet square at the base and 103 feet in height. Ballikinrain Castle is the seat of Archibald Ernest Orr-Ewing esq. J.P. and Killearn House the seat of Colonel Peter Blackburn. Acreage of the parish, 15,370; rateable value, £14,455; population in 1881, 1,131, and in 1891, 1,182, the village containing 354 of that number.

NEW KILPATRICK, a parish, formerly partly included in this county, was, in 1891, wholly transferred to the county of Dumbarton, which see.

KILSYTH is a town, police burgh and parish in Stirling poor combination and in the small debt court district of Lennoxtown. The parish is about 7 miles in length, and 4½ in breadth. In form it is an irregular oblong, bounded by the river Carron on the north, which separates it from St. Ninians, Fintry on the north-west, Cumbernauld and Kirkintilloch, in Lanarkshire, on the south, Denny on the east, and Campsie on the west. It is watered by the Carron and Kelvin rivers; it also contains one of the reservoirs of the Forth and Clyde canal. Railway communication with Glasgow was opened here in 1878, through the Blane Valley section of the North British line, and there is a line from Larbert on the Caledonian railway. The town is on the main road from Stirling to Glasgow, 35 miles west from Edinburgh, 15 south-south-west from Stirling, between 12 and 13 north-north-east from Glasgow, and nearly 12 west-by-south from Falkirk, and is governed by a provost, two bailies and six commissioners. A police and justice of the peace court is held every Monday. About the middle of the parish is a hill, 1,393 feet high, which exhibits a fine specimen of basaltic columns. A considerable proportion of the inhabitants are employed in weaving for Glasgow houses and resident manufacturers. The parish is stocked with coal and ironstone, quantities of the latter being supplied to the Carron Iron Works, near Falkirk, and to Gartsherrie Iron Works, Coatbridge. The production of coke is carried on by Messrs. William Baird and Co. Lim. and also whinstone and freestone quarrying at Barwood, Auchensterry, Colzium and the Glen quarries. Fairs are held on the first Friday in April and the third Friday in November. Branches of the Royal Bank of Scotland and the National Bank of Scotland Limited, are established in the town, also a savings bank. Kilsyth formerly gave the title of viscount to the unfortunate family of Livingstone, attainted in 1715 for their attachment to the house of Stuart; in the burial place of this family, the bodies of the last Lady Kilsyth and her infant son lay embalmed for many years. In 1637, near the village, the Covenanters, commanded by General Baillie, were defeated by Montrose. Colzium House is the property of Sir Archibald Edmonstone bart. D.L. but now occupied by Græme Alex. Lockhart Whitelaw esq. Sir Archibald Edmonstone bart. D.L. Robert Glen esq. Thomas B. Provan esq. James J. Caddell esq. the Carron Co. Messrs. William Baird and Co. William Dobbie esq. Alexander Provan esq. and William Whyte esq. are the principal landowners. Acreage of the civil parish, 13,121; rateable value, £32,355; population in 1881, 6,840, and in 1891, 7,424, the town numbering 6,073; ecclesiastical parish, population in 1891, 6,653.

Gavell, 2 miles south, and Colzium, about 1½ east, are hamlets in this parish, and both have a station, the former on the Glasgow and Kilsyth section of the North British railway, and the latter on the Larbert and Kilsyth line of the Caledonian railway.

Post, Telegraph & Money Order Office & Savings Bank; Archibald Chalmers, postmaster. Letters received through Glasgow. Deliveries, 8.30 a.m. & 2.30 & 7 p.m.; dispatches, 9.30 a.m. & 1.20, 3.15, 5.55 & 9.55 p.m

KIPPEN is a parish in Dumbarton poor combination and small debt court district of Stirling, 8 miles in length by from 2 to 4 in breadth, and is bounded on the north by the river Forth, which separates the county from Perthshire, on the east by Gargunnock, on the south by Balfron and Fintry, and on the west by the parish of Drymen; it is well watered, and from some of the higher grounds an extensive and varied prospect, including Stirling Castle and the romantic woody eminences adjacent, is presented. Under the provisions of the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order No. 13, the part of Kippen parish formerly in Perthshire has been transferred to Stirlingshire. The village is in the eastern part of the parish, on the road from Doune to Glasgow, and has a station 1½ miles north on the Stirling and Balloch section of the North Brit sh railway, and is 10 miles west from Stirling. Mineral wells are in the neighbourhood. A quarry of red stone is also near the village. Fairs are held at Kippen on the second Wednesday in December, and at Balgair, a moor about 2 miles from Kippen, for horses, cattle and sheep, on the Friday before the 26th June. Near the railway station is the Ford of Frew, where, in 1746, Prince Charles lost his cannon, while retreating before the Campbells. James Stirling esq. of Garden; Robert Cunninghame-Graham esq. LARBERT (or Larbet) is a parish, in Falkirk small debt court district, and is 3½ miles broad by 3 long, bounded on the north by St. Ninians, north-east by Airth, east by Bothkennar, south by the river Carron, which divides it from Falkirk, and west by Dunipace. The village is situated on the side of a hill, on the northern bank of the Carron, and on the road from Falkirk to Stirling, and has a station on the Glasgow and Stirling section of the Caledonian railway, and is 3 miles west from Falkirk and 8 south-south-east from Stirling. The civil parish of Dunipace is included in Larbert ecclesiastical parish. The present established church, erected in 1822, from designs of — Hamilton, of Glasgow, is an edifice of stone in the Elizabethan Gothic style, with square tower, containing one bell, and has upwards of 1,000 sittings. The Falkirk cattle trysts are held on Stenhouse moor in this parish in August, September and October, when 20,000 to 30,000 head of cattle and great numbers of sheep are exposed for sale. Close to Larbert station are the works of Messrs. Dobbie, Forbes & Co. and Messrs. Jones & Campbell, for the manufacture of stoves, grates and ranges. Near this place the great Roman road or causeway passes, and about a quarter of a mile to the west the foundation of a bridge is visible when the Carron river is low. Kinnaird House, in a park about half a mile square, now the residence of W. D. Gillies esq. was once the residence and property of James Bruce, celebrated for his travels in Abyssinia, who was born in this house in 1730, and died here in 1794; his remains are interred in the parish churchyard, and a monument of iron, cast at Carron, is erected over his grave. At the Reformation, an ancestor of this traveller repaired the old church. Carron Hall is the seat of Walter Easton esq. J.P.; Stenhouse, of William K. Gair esq. and Dunipace House, of John A. Harvie-Brown esq. John Bell Sherriff esq. J.P. of Carronvale and John H. N. Graham esq. of Larbert House, are the principal landowners. Acreage of the parish, 3,963; rateable value, £31,300; population in 1881, 6,346, and in 1891, 8,340; the village having 904 of that number.

Stenhousemuir is a small town about half a mile east of Larbert, in the same parish. Another half mile distant is the hamlet of North Broomage, near which is the Scottish National Institution for the Education of Imbecile Children—a handsome building in the style of the continental ecclesiastical architecture. It is sustained partly by donation and partly by fees which are paid by the more wealthy parents. Near this institution is the Stirling District Lunatic Asylum for the counties of Stirling, Dumbarton, Linlithgow and Clackmannan. In July, 1893, a new hospital block was opened; it is in the Elizabethan style, from designs of Messrs. A. & W. Black, architects, of Falkirk. The central block contains the administrative department and dining hall. The cost of the new block was £20,000. Population of Stenhousemuir in 1891, 3,718.

LIMERIGG, see SLAMANNAN.

LOGIE is a parish, in the small debt court district of Stirling, and is bounded on the north-west by Perthshire, east by Clackmannanshire and south by the river Forth. Under the provisions of the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary orders 124 and 127, a part of Lecropt parish in Stirlingshire, part of Alloa in Perthshire, have been transferred to Logie, and those portions of Logie parish formerly in the counties of Clackmannan and Perth have been added to Stirlingshire, the whole parish of Logie therefore now being in the latter county. The kirk is about 3 miles from Stirling station on the North British and Caledonian railway, and the same distance from Bridge of Allan station on the Caledonian railway. The village of Blair Logie is most agreeably situated at the base of the Ochil hills, at the entrance to Sheriff Muir and the mouth of Glendevon, and presents a singularly pleasing scene of natural beauty, and is a favourite resort in summer for visitors from the large towns. Cambuskenneth Abbey, founded in 1147, by King David I. for Augustine canons, stands to the north of the Forth, about 1 mile east of Stirling, and now shows little but the ground plan of a great abbey, some of the materials having been used in the building of "Mar's Work," in Stirling, James VI. having given it to the Earl of Mar at the Reformation: the tower still remains nearly perfect, and the foundations of the church have been excavated to show the plan and extent of the buildings, and during this work, the body of James III. killed at Sauchieburn, was discovered and reinterred in a new tomb near the site of the high altar, the expense being borne by H.M. the Queen, who had an inscription detailing the particulars placed on the tomb. About 1 mile north of the abbey stands the Wallace Monument, a lofty stone tower of 4 rooms, which contain relics of the hero, including his sword from Dumbarton, and busts of other Scottish worthies, with other curiosities: the outside has in front a bronze statue of Wallace, who, in 1297, defeated the English at the battle of Stirling Bridge, near this spot. Lord Abercromby D.L., J.P. is the principal landowner. The area of the parish previous to the alteration of the boundary was 11,814 acres; rateable value of present area, £34,445; the population in 1881 was 4,696, and in 1891, 4,252, of the ecclesiastical parish in 1891, 2,286.

Post Office, Blair Logie; John Dawson, postmaster. Letters received through Stirling. Deliveries, 7 & 9 a.m.; dispatches, 9 a.m. & 3 & 7.15 p.m. Postal orders are issued here, but not paid. The nearest money order & telegraph office is at Menstrie, 2 miles distant

REDDING MUIRHEAD, see POLMONT.

ST. NINIANS is a town and parish, in Stirling poor combination and small debt court district. The form of the parish is irregular; in extent, it may be computed at about 12 miles from east to west and about 6 from north to south, bounded on the east by the parish of Airth, on the south by Dunipace and the river Carron, which separates it from Denny and Kilsyth, on the west by Fintry and Gargunnock, on the north by the river Forth, which separates it from Kincardine, Lecropt, Logie and Alva (if a small space occupied by the parish of Stirling be excepted). Under the provisions of the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 118, a part of St. Ninians parish has been transferred to Stirling, and a part of that parish added to St. Ninians. The town, now incorporated with Stirling burgh, is on the road from that place to Falkirk and Glasgow, is about 2 miles south from Stirling and consists of one long and rather narrow street, the houses of which are curious and old fashioned, and upon many are dates of considerable antiquity, and some have stones upon which various characters and implements are rudely and grotesquely carved. The dwellings, however, are for the most part whitewashed. Well-cultivated grounds and thriving plantations abound in the vicinity. The parish derives its name from the patron saint of the ancient church, the steeple of which still remains. The church to which this fabric was formerly attached being used as a powder magazine by the Highlanders in 1746, was blown up immediately before their retreat to the north: though scarcely one stone of the body of the church was left upon another, the steeple was uninjured. The manufacture of nails has for a long time been carried on at St. Ninians; other staples are the tanning of leather and the manufacture of screw bolts. Earls Burn, a feeder of the Carron, and Bannock Burn, a tributary of the Forth, both rise in the western part of the parish, in which are also Earls Hill, 1,443 feet high, and Hart Hill, 1,428 feet. Polmaise Castle, the seat of Lieut.-Col. John Murray D.L., J.P.; Sauchie-Burn House, of Sir James Ramsay-Gibson Maitland bart. D.L., J.P.; Touch House, of Sir Alan Henry Seton-Steuart bart. D.L., J.P. and Craigforth House, of James Couper esq. are in this parish. Lieut.-Col. John Murray, Sir James Ramsay-Gibson Maitland bart. Sir Alan Hy. Seton-Steuart bart. Michael Hugh Shaw-Stewart esq. M.P., D.L., J.P. of Carnock, Joseph Cheney Bolton esq. D.L., J.P. of Plean, Col. Alex. Wilson, of Bannockburn, and the Duke of Montrose K.T. are the principal landowners. The area of the parish previous to the alteration of the boundary was 38,047 acres; rateable value of present area, £55,882; the population in 1881 was 10,423, and in 1891, 9,571, viz.:—Bannockburn, 2,000; Stirling burgh, 2,908, and landward, 4,663.

Cambusbarron is a village in the parish of St. Ninians, 1 mile north-west from that place. Extensive woollen mills, belonging to Messrs. R. Smith and Son, give employment to the majority of the inhabitants. Board schools were erected in 1875, at a cost of £4,000. Population in 1891, 1,121.

Carnock is a small district in the parish of St. Ninians, but in the postal delivery of Larbert.

SLAMANNAN is a parish, lying on the south bank of the river Avon, extending along the margin of that stream for about 5 miles, and is from 3 to 4 in breadth: it is in the small debt court district of Falkirk. Near the north-west end of the parish there is a point where the shires of Stirling, Dumbarton and Lanark meet, and at the south-west end the shires of Stirling and Lanark meet with that of Linlithgow. On the southern boundary of the district is a small lake called Black Loch, which is a tributary to the great reservoir for the Forth and Clyde canal. The village is on the road from Linlithgow to Glasgow, with a station close to it on the Glasgow, Coatbridge and Manuel section of the North British railway, 7 miles south-west from Falkirk and 10 south-west from Linlithgow. The Established church, erected about the beginning of the present century, is a plain stone edifice with a small bell tower containing one bell, and has about 800 sittings. In the village is a branch of the Bank of Scotland. The whole neighbourhood abounds in collieries, but the surface is composed principally of bog and moss. There are a few dairy farms in the parish. Alexander Peddie-Waddell esq. J.P. of Balquhatstone; John Motherwell Alston esq. Coatbridge, and Messrs. Aitken Brothers, of Falkirk, are the principal landowners. Acreage of the parish, 7,062; rateable value, £25,125; the population in 1881, 5,850, and in 1891, 6,731, the village containing 1,727 of that number; the population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1891 was 7,221.

Avonbridge is a small village partly in the parish of Slamannan and partly in that of Muiravonside, about 7 miles south-east from Falkirk, and is a station on the Glasgow, Coatbridge and Manuel section of the North British railway. Here is a woollen and yarn spinning mill. Population and acreage returned with Slamannan.

STIRLING.

STIRLING is an ancient royal burgh, also a parliamentary burgh and head of small debt court district and poor combination, as well as the capital of the county, and a parish, and possesses a railway station on the Caledonian and North British lines, 36 miles west from Edinburgh, 29 north-east from Glasgow, 33 south-west from Perth, 11 north-west from Falkirk and 6 south from Dunblane, about 7 miles above Alloa. During the Roman occupation (A.D. 79 to 410) the town was styled by them, Binobara. The strath through which the Forth flows expands into a broad flat plain, through which the river winds until it merges into the Firth; just at the widening of this strath, which is there about 2 miles wide, stands a detached mass of rock, to the south of the river, sloping up from the south-east and showing to the north an abrupt precipice 230 feet in height; the town occupies the slope of the rock and also the level summit, on which are the Grey Friars church, Mar's Work, Argyll's Lodging, and lastly, occupying the extremity and highest point of the hill, stands the castle.

The old bridge, erected in the 9th century, is an unusual specimen of bridge work, having been but little altered and still showing the four original arches; it rises, as nearly all old bridges did, to a point in the centre, and its ends still retain the towers in which its gates worked. There is another bridge over the river known as the New bridge, and erected in 1831, and the railway viaduct crosses near them. Kildean bridge, which gave the name of the battle of "Stirling Bridge" (1297), was an old wooden bridge further down the stream and of this there are scarcely any vestiges.

The streets of the burgh are well paved and lighted with gas, and the town is well supplied with water, brought from reservoirs on the Touch Hills, a distance of about 5 miles.

Stirling, as a burgh, dates from the time of Alexander I. King of Scotland (1107-1124), who granted the first charter in 1119; it is now governed by a provost, who is also high sheriff, the only provost in Scotland holding this important office, four bailies, a dean of guild, a treasurer, and 14 councillors, who are elected according to the terms of the "Scottish Burgh Reform Act." The limits of the burgh have been enlarged and now include St. Ninians and other small villages and hamlets.

The sheriff courts for the Stirling, or Western, district of the county are held here.

The burgh, in conjunction with Culross, Queensferry, Inverkeithing and Dunfermline, returns one member to Parliament.

There are four Established churches, four Free, three United Presbyterian and one Episcopal, and chapels for Wesleyan, Baptist, Congregational and Roman Catholic. The East and West congregations of the Establishment worship in the old parish church, known as the Grey Friars church, built (1494) by James IV. and the chancel added a little later by Cardinal Beaton, who was murdered at St. Andrews, 1545, though some accounts attribute it to the archbishop of the same name, uncle to his eminence.

The North church, in the Norman style, is in Murray place, where also is the Free North church, with a fine spire.

Holy Trinity church, in Albert place, is another handsome edifice. A monument in the Grecian style was erected at a cost of upwards of £500, in front of the United Presbyterian church, St. John street, is a military prison. The County Court House founder of the United Presbyterian body, 1740.

The Municipal Buildings, King street, is an edifice, comprising a tower with a fine lofty spire and a clock with four dials; the council chamber and town clerk's offices are in the upper portion of the building, the front of which is circular in form, the small portico at the entrance, which faces King street from the centre being surmounted by a statue of Sir William Wallace, with the inscription, "Loyalty," "Liberty," "Wallace."

The Corn Exchange, near the head of King street, a large structure, used as a grain market place, was formerly the principal hall for public meetings. In 1882, the Arcade, a glass roofed thoroughfare, between Murray place and King street, was built; it contains the Douglas hotel, a number of shops, and two halls, the larger seated for 1,100, and licensed for stage plays, and the Lesser Arcade hall for smaller meetings.

In 1883 a new Public hall was erected in Albert place by the Stirling Public Halls Company Limited; this building, designed by Mr. William Simpson, jun. architect, Stirling, cost about £12,000, and contains a large hall fitted for dramatic performances, for which there is a licence, and seated for 1,400 persons; and a smaller hall, seated for 300, with retiring and cloak rooms and keeper's apartments. The large hall contains an organ, which cost £2,300.

The old Town House, which stands in Broad street, has a tower, with a clock and a set of musical chimes. Behind it, in St. John street, is a military prison. The County Court House is in Viewfield place, opposite to which is a fountain of granite erected in honour of Her Majesty's Jubilee.

The Smith Institute, in Dumbarton road, erected in 1873, is a stone building, with portico front, and was founded by the late Thomas S. Smith esq. of Glassingall, at a cost of £5,000, who also left funds for its future maintenance; the town council gave the site, and the building embraces a reading room, library, museum and picture gallery, all of which are open to the public free, the provost and others being appointed trustees.

The Stirling Tract Depot, in Dumbarton road, forms a very imposing addition to the already large number of fine buildings in this road.

In 1856 a Poor House was erected at a cost of £7,000.

Stirling has long been celebrated for its schools and hospitals; some of the latter are foundations of long standing, and are well endowed. Cowane's Hospital for decayed Guild Brethren was founded by John Cowane in 1639.

The newspapers are the "Stirling Observer," the "Stirling Journal and Advertiser," the "Bridge of Allan Gazette," "Bridge of Allan Reporter," "Stirling Sentinel," the "Visitor" and the "Callander Advertiser," circulating throughout the district.

There are branches respectively of the Bank of Scotland, the National Bank of Scotland Limited, the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, the Royal Bank of Scotland, the Clydesdale Bank Limited, the Union Bank of Scotland Limited, and the British Linen Co. Bank, besides the Stirling Savings Bank.

The principal hotels are the Golden Lion, in King street, the Royal hotel, in Barnton place, Lennox's Station hotel, and the Douglas hotel, in Murray place.

Some shipping trade is carried on, and during the summer river steamers from Leith afford a cheap and agreeable communication with Edinburgh.

The chief manufactures of Stirling are carpets, tartans, tweeds, winceys and shawls, for which it has been long noted, and these branches engage a considerable number of weavers. The other leading avocations are tanning, iron founding and agricultural implement making, a large wool factory, two carriage building establishments and three perambulator and iron bedstead manufactories.

A weekly market is held.

The fairs are held on the first Friday in February, for horses; the last Friday in May, for cattle and horses; the first Friday in March, April and May, for cattle; the third Friday in October and the last Friday in May, for hiring servants.

Stirling Castle, which stands at the end of a steep ridge of rock, is one of the fortresses appointed by the "Act of Union" to be kept in a state of repair; it is entered from the town across an esplanade and over a drawbridge, by which the inner courtyard is reached, around which are the royal buildings, consisting of the palace built by James V. a building of stone ornamented with grotesque carving; the Parliament House, erected by James III. and the chapel, built by James VI.; in the palace is the Douglas room, in which James II. who was born in this building, stabbed the 8th Earl of Douglas; the other royal personages connected with this fortress were Alexander I. of Scotland, who died here 1124, James VI. who was crowned here at the age of 13 months, and Charles II. crowned at Scone 1651, who occupied Stirling on his way to Worcester. The Regent Lennox was killed during an attack made on the town by Mary's adherents in 1571. James VI.'s eldest son, Prince Henry, was baptized in the castle chapel. There is a walk round the castle rock entered from the town. Between the castle and the church are "The Valley," where tournaments took place, and the gardens, in which is a curious mound known as the King's Knot; here also is the King's Park and the New Cemetery.

Argyll's Lodging, east side of the Castle wynd, is a fine house, erected in 1632 by the Earl of Stirling; in it King Charles II. lodged in 1651. Mar's Work, in Broad street, has some fine windows and much old Gothic work taken from Cambuskenneth Abbey; the first of these houses is used as a military hospital, the second is in ruins or was never completed.

The castle stood many sieges and was the centre of not a few battles. The town, in 1147, was given to the English to secure the terms of the treaty of Falaise and restored to the Scotch by Richard I. in 1186, but in 1297 the English, in an attempt to regain it, were defeated by Wallace at Stirling Bridge and their army, under the Earl of Surrey, was cut to pieces; in 1304, Edward I. after a severe siege took the castle and town. In 1314 Robert Bruce besieged it, and a relieving army under Edward II. having been destroyed at Bannockburn, the fortress surrendered, but Edward III. having extorted from Baliol in 1333 a surrender of all the principal fortresses of Scotland, in 1339 the Scotch again took it, and then for two centuries it remained in their possession undisturbed, until Queen Mary's adherents made an attempt on it in 1571, and the Earl of Ruthven and his brother took it in 1583. The Covenanters held it in 1639, and the Duke of Argyll occupied it in 1715 for the Hanoverian Government. In 1745 Prince Charles Edward unsuccessfully attempted its capture, and this ended its vicissitudes and it is now a military depot.

On the esplanade of the castle stands a statue of King Robert Bruce, occupying a commanding position in front of the castle, and overlooking the battle fields of Stirling and Bannockburn. The monument was unveiled by Lady Alexander, on the 24th November, 1877.

The area of the parish, previous to the alteration of the boundary in May, 1895, was 1,378 acres; the rateable value of the altered area, £63,455; in 1891 the population of the entire parish, after alterations made under the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889," was 14,170, and of the royal burgh, 16,974, the population of the whole parliamentary burgh in 1891 was: Stirling, 1[illegible]; Cultross [illegible]; Dunfermline, 19,647; Inverkeithing, 1,563 and Queensferry, 1,531; total 39,987.

Mary Kirk is a quoad sacra parish taken from that of Stirling; population in 1891, 4,759.

SUTHERLANDSHIRE.

THIS is the most northerly but one of the counties of Scotland, and is bordered on the north and west by the Atlantic Ocean, which accounts for the rugged and deeply indented coasts on those two faces; it also has a coast line of 26 miles on the Moray Firth on the south-east, and 18 miles along the Dornoch Firth on the south, its remaining boundaries on the east and south being the counties of Caithness and Ross respectively, but though it possesses this extensive sea coast it has only one port of any importance, viz. Dornoch, on the south-east coast; from east to west it extends 62 miles, and from north to south 49 miles. It has an area of 2,027 square miles, or 1,297,849 acres, exclusive of 47,633 acres of water, 12,812 of foreshore, and 1,553 of tidal water. The population in 1891 comprised 10,395 males and 11,501 females; total, 21,896, and in 1881 was 23,370; the inhabited houses in 1891 were 4,713, and in 1881, 4,840. In size it ranks as the fifth, and in population as the twenty-ninth, of the counties of Scotland.

Early History.—This northern county appears to have been held by the Picts, and though the Romans penetrated here, there seems to be no record of any permanent occupation by them. The Dalriads in 767 fought the Picts at Forteviot, Perthshire, but did not succeed in penetrating further, though in 843 their king succeeded to the Pictish throne, and these northern tribes had to turn their attention to resisting the constant invasions of the Danes, and were also frequently engaged in clan feuds. King James I. made several expeditions to the north to control the clans, but these feuds continued; early in the 15th century the Lord of the Isles invaded this county, but was defeated at the Sands of Fleet, and in 1517 the Mackays made an incursion, but were repulsed. These feuds continued up to the early part of the 17th century, and in 1650 Montrose ravaged these parts.

Surface, Soil, Produce &c.—This large county consists almost entirely of an uninterrupted succession of mountains, valleys and morasses. The northern and western coasts are bold and rocky, deeply indented by inlets and bays, and with many large promontories, among which Cape Wrath, at the north-western corner, is most prominent. The shire comprehends the political districts of Strathnaver (anciently a county of itself), Assynt and Sutherland, the first-named including the northern part, and the two latter the southern. The interior is divided naturally into three districts—the Eastern, the Middle and the Western. The first is a level narrow strip of land on the east coast, sheltered from the north by a ridge of mountains from 300 to 800 feet high; the second is occupied by the four straths of the rivers Helmsdale, Brora, Fleet and Oykel; and the Western district, which borders on the Atlantic, is wild and mountainous, abounding in salt and fresh water lochs. The mountains of greatest altitude in the shire are Ben More, 3,235; Ben Clebrig, 3,157 and Ben Hope, 3,040 feet above the level of the sea. The large extent of Sutherlandshire was the last district in Scotland subjected to the improvements of modern times. Until about the close of the last century it was a country lying in nearly the same condition as it must have exhibited centuries before, and, in many respects, was shut out from the progress of civilisation. The great barrier to improvement was the dangerous narrow firths to be crossed, and the total destitution of roads, either along the shore or into the interior. Two circumstances at length brought about the introduction of efficient measures of improvement. The first was the exertions made by the noble family of Gower, and the second was the liberality of Parliament, which agreed to advance a moiety of the expense to be incurred for certain roads and bridges in the Highlands. Under the fostering care of the first and succeeding Dukes of Sutherland, the aspect of the county has been changed. Breeding of sheep is the great staple business of the shire, for which its sheltered straths and swelling hills, as well as its climate (which is superior to that of Caithness-shire), eminently adapt it. Under the various improvements of store farming the county rears many thousands of sheep, mostly of the Cheviot breed, of which a great number are annually exported. Attention has also been paid to agriculture, and the soil, being of a sandy, open-bottomed nature, bears excellent crops of oats, barley, turnips and clover. The chief crops are: oats, 7,777 acres; turnips, 3,084 acres and barley, 1,622 acres; the total corn crops being 9,616 acres and the total green crop, 4,828 acres; the land under grass was 8,236 and permanent pasture, 9,059 acres; the total area of land and water being 1,345,480 acres, of which 1,011,478 acres are mountain and heath and 18,784 woods and plantations. The live stock in 1894 comprised: horses, 2,657; cattle, 12,589; sheep, 213,330 and pigs, 906. The exports of farm produce have been much assisted by the erection of piers at Helmsdale and other places on the coast, chiefly at the cost of the late Duke of Sutherland. The building of houses has been greatly facilitated by the abundance of sandstone, limestone and slate found in different parts of the county. Coal has for many years been wrought at Brora, and the production of coal in the county in 1894 was 3,731 tons, value £1,213. From the fishing stations on the coast there are annually exported immense quantities of herrings, besides cod, ling &c. This county is almost devoid of manufactures, the only works being at Brora and Rogart, at which places tweeds, blankets &c. are made. Hand looms are, however, still worked in many of the crofters' houses. The principal rivers are the Brora, Borgie, Naver, Helmsdale, Halladale, Laxford, Inchard, Inver, Shin, Fleet, Strathmore and Gruke; the chief sea lochs, the Fleet, Glencoul, Glendhu, Inver and Laxford, and the principal fresh water lochs are the Assynt, Cama, Garbetbeg, Hope, Loval, Meadie, Merkland, More, Naver, Shin (17 miles long) and the Vevatie. The railway system belongs to the Highland Railway Company and comprises a line which, coming north from Inverness, turns to the west when it reaches the Dornoch Firth and enters this county at Invershin, runs due north to Lairg, when it turns eastward to Golspie, runs up the coast to Helmsdale, where it turns again to the west and north-west, quitting the county near Forsinard station and proceeding to Wick.

Division, Representation &c.—Sutherlandshire comprises 13 parishes and part of one other, and 16 ecclesiastical parishes, in the synod of Sutherland and Caithness. It contains only one town, Dornoch, which is a royal and parliamentary burgh, joining with Kirkwall, Wick, Dingwall, Tain and Cromarty in returning one representative, and the county at large sends another. The parliamentary constituency in 1894-5 numbered 2,493. The valuation for 1894-5 was £99,200.

BRORA is a thriving village, in the parish of Clyne and small debt court district of Dornoch; it is on the south-east coast, at the point where the river Brora falls into the Moray Firth, and is about 12 miles south-south-west from Helmsdale, and 6 north-north-east from Golspie, and has a station on the Tain and Helmsdale section of the Highland railway. The climate is very dry and the temperature warm, and the sands here attract a large number of bathers. The links have long been famous for golf. There is excellent fishing in the Brora water, and Strathbrora, which places abound with salmon. There is also a mile of free sea trout fishing to be had. The curing of fish employs some of the inhabitants, and there is a distillery in the neighbourhood, and also a coal pit of considerable importance which has been worked for 300 years. Bricks and tiles are made here. There is also a large tweed mill here. A branch of the Town and County Bank is established in this place. The population in 1891 was 580.

DORNOCH, a parish on the south-east coast, to the north of Dornoch Firth, is also a small seaport and a royal and parliamentary burgh, the capital of the county and head of a sheriff court, and in the Sutherland poor combination; it is 9 miles north from Tain, 7 south from Golspie and 15 north from Cromarty. The parish, which is bounded north by Golspie, south by Creich and west by Hogart, extends 10 miles from east to west, by 6 in breadth. There are no railways in the parish, but Mound station, on the Highland line, is close to the northern boundary, across the Fleet, 6 miles from Dornoch city. Dornoch was constituted a royal burgh by Charles I. in 1628, and is governed by a provost, two bailies, a dean of guild and a treasurer, with four councillors. In conjunction with Wick, Kirkwall, Dingwall, Cromarty and Tain, it returns one member to Parliament. The trade of the town is very limited, owing chiefly to its locality at an angle of the county and the free navigation of the firth being obstructed by the bar of dangerous sand banks extending between Dornoch and Tain. Some compensation has been found of late years, in the increased number of summer visitors for golf and sea bathing. The water supply and drainage are both good, and several new villas have been erected. The cathedral, now serving only as the parish church, was originally the head of the diocese of Caithness, founded, it is said, by King David I. (1124-53), but at present united to those of Moray and Ross, with a cathedral church at Inverness. The cathedral of Dornoch was first erected by Gilbert de Moray, bishop of Caithness (1223-60), and is in the Early English and Early Geometric styles, consisting of choir, aisleless nave, transepts and a low central tower with stunted spire: the church, with the exception of the tower, was almost entirely destroyed by fire in 1570, during an incursion of hostile tribes, and on 5 November, 1605, one of the arcades was blown down by a violent gale: John, 12th Earl of Sutherland, in 1614 began the repair of the fabric, which was subsequently completed in a plain style and the building eventually reduced to the position of a parish church: in 1836-7, the late Duchess and Countess of Sutherland (d. 1839) restored the church to its original dimensions and added a new groined roof; at the east end is a memorial with marble effigy by Chantrey, to George, 2nd Marquess and 1st Duke of Sutherland K.G., P.C. d. 19 July, 1833. A small part of the bishop's palace still remains, but all the manses of the other dignitaries of the cathedral have disappeared, and the town has lost much of its ecclesiastical importance since the triumph of the Reformation. There are two public fairs or markets held annually in the town, on the first Tuesday in November and the other on the first Wednesday in December: these fairs were formerly wont to be thronged by persons from distant parts of the country, but now, in consequence of the rise of small villages in different places and the establishment of cattle markets elsewhere, they are but thinly attended. The Duke of Sutherland is the principal landowner. The area of the parish comprises 30,189 acres; rateable value of the parish, £6,754 10s. 1d. and of the burgh, £1,649 12s.; in 1891 the population of the parish was 2,404, which included 514 in the royal burgh, and in 1881, 2,525, including 497 in the burgh.

Clashmore is a modern village, about 5 miles west from Dornoch, situated partly on the estate of Sutherland and partly on that of Skibo, being divided only by a small burn which separates these properties and by the parliamentary road to Caithness, which passes through the village. There is a comfortable inn, the Sutherland Arms, erected some years since by the late Duchess-Countess of Sutherland. Within half a mile from the village of Clashmore is Skibo Castle, the seat of Evan Charles Sutherland esq. now the residence of Fairfax Rhodes esq.: this castle, at one time a residence and grange of the Bishops of Sutherland and Caithness, was for a long time a fortress, and the celebrated Marquess of Montrose, in the year 1650, spent two nights as a prisoner in the castle, after his defeat by the Presbyterian army near Bonar Bridge, and his subsequent capture by Neil Macleod, of Assynt, who delivered him up to his enemies: subsequently the castle was dismantled and allowed to go to ruin, until early in this century, when it was demolished and the present castle erected on its site. An extensive fair is held on the first Monday of May, at Clashmore. The Mound is the nearest railway station, 8 miles distant. Population in 1891, 204.

Embo, a fishing village and life boat station in this parish, is 2 miles north-east from Dornoch. Here is a new harbour for fishermen, constructed to a great extent by government aid. The Mound is the nearest railway station, 5 miles distant. Population in 1891, 664.

DURNESS is a parish, in Sutherlandshire poor combination, and is in north-west Sutherland, situated between Whiten Head and Cape Wrath; its size is in length 20 miles, in breadth 13 miles, principally hilly pasture; it is bounded on the west by Eddrachillis parish, and east by Tongue, having its northern boundary of about 17 miles facing the Atlantic Ocean. Cape Wrath, the most northerly promontory on the western coast, rises perpendicularly from the sea to a height of 523 feet, and presents a series of rugged rocks with a sunken reef in front: there is a large lighthouse on it. Whiten Head is another promontory, in the eastern part of the parish, 500 feet high. Durness kirk stands on the east side of the Kyle of Durness, and is about 45 miles north-by-west from Lairg station on the Tain and Brora section of the Highland railway. Loch Erriboll is a sea loch, extending about 8 miles inland. Hope loch, an inland loch, is about 6 miles long by about 1 broad. The parish is watered by several small streams. The mountains are—Ben Hope, 3,040 feet in height, the loftiest in the county; Fornaven, 2,980 feet; Ben Spronnu, 2,536 feet, and Saval More, 2,547 feet. Lime is quarried here. The noted cave of "Smoo" is about a mile from Durness Inn. Acreage, 140,812; in 1881 the population was 987, and in 1891, 960.

GOLSPIE is a parish and village—the latter, situated on the Moray Firth, 8 miles north of Dornoch, 16 north from Tain and 15 east of Lairg, with a station on the main line of the Highland railway, and there is another station at Mound on the south boundary of the county; the parish, which is in the small debt court district of Dornoch and poor combination of Sutherland, is 8 miles from east to west by 6 deep, and is bounded north by Clyne, west by Rogart and south by Dornoch. The village is one of the most important in the shire. The great parliamentary road passes through it. A branch of the Town and County Bank Limited, and another of the British Linen Company, are established here. A pier has been constructed at a cost of £2,000, defrayed by the County Council. The parish church, a small building, erected in 1619, stands within a well enclosed burial ground, surrounded by trees; and at the west end of the village is the Free church, and there is a good public school. To the north of the village stands Dunrobin Castle, the seat of the Duke of Sutherland, and known to have existed in the 12th century, and, according to old historians, it was even long before that period the family fortalice of the ancient Thanes and Earls of Sutherland, tradition fixing the date of erection as 1098. Malcolm Caenmore (1057-1093) bestowed the title of earl on the then Thane of Sutherland, and the third earl married a daughter of King Robert Bruce: the castle is a massive edifice of freestone, the window details and turrets Scotch Baronial, while the high-pitched roofs and turret caps give it the appearance of a French chatean: at one angle is a tower over 100 feet in height, and having an arched gateway leading into the courtyard: the grand staircase of polished Caen stone is very fine, and there are some good rooms, including the state rooms on the sea front, appropriated to Her Majesty's use during her visit in 1842, and there is a good collection of pictures and a museum: the gardens are large and well laid out; Ben-Bhraggie, towering over all to the height of 1,300 feet: upon the summit of this eminence has been placed a lofty monument to a former Duke of Sutherland, and near the village a memorial has been erected to the late Duchess, raised by subscription. The Duke of Sutherland is the principal landowner. The area comprises 19,690 acres; rateable value, £6,694 6s. 8d. including £1,350 16s. for village of Golspie; the population in 1891 was 1,451, including 935 in the village, and in 1881, 1,556, with 956 in the village.

Backies is a small village in this parish.

HELMSDALE is a modern village, in the parish of Kildonan, and in the Sutherland poor combination, and a small debt court district is held here twice a year. There is a railway station here on the Golspie and Wick section of the Highland railway. It is 60 miles south-by-west from Wick and 17 north-north-east from Golspie, at the mouth of the river from which it takes its name, and on the coast road that passes northward to Wick. There is a harbour now (1896) in course of erection, at the cost of £14,000. During the herring fishing season, large fleets of boats resort here. Fish curing is carried on in the village. The river that flows through the extensive strath to Kildonan abounds with salmon. A branch of the British Linen Banking Co. is established here. Just opposite the village stand the ruins of a castle, built by Margaret Baillie, Countess of Sutherland, after the death of her husband the Earl of Sutherland in 1460; her son, with whom she had some differences, damaged it, but it was restored in July, 1567: these ruins serve as a landmark to mariners. The principal landowner is the Duke of Sutherland. The population in 1891, including East Helmsdale, was 743.

West Helmsdale is a village on the west bank of the river Helmsdale. The population, including Marrel and Gartymore, in 1891 was 580.

WIGTOWNSHIRE.

THIS, the extreme south-western county of Scotland, formed part of the ancient district of Galloway; it is extremely irregular in shape, caused by the indentation of Luce Bay on the south, an open space of water 13 miles wide by 16 from north to south, its western head forming the Mull of Galloway, and the eastern one Burrowhead; these two headlands are known by the Celtic name of the Rhinns (Rhyns or Rhynos) of Galloway. On the eastern boundary of the county Wigtown Bay extends from Grange of Cree, on the north to Eggerness, just north of Garlieston Bay, a distance of 8 miles; and on the north of the county Loch Ryan indents for a like distance. Its boundaries are the Irish Channel on the west and south, Wigtown Bay and Kirkcudbrightshire on the east, and Ayrshire on the north, its length being 32 miles, and extreme breadth from east to west 28, and contains about 486 square miles, or 310,747 acres. The population in 1891 comprised 16,976 males and 19,086 females; total, 36,062, and in 1881 a total of 38,611; the inhabited houses in 1891 were 7,001, and in 1881, 7,440. Wigtownshire stands seventeenth in point of size and the twenty-second in population of Scottish counties.

Early History.—When in 79 A.D. the Romans crossed the Solway into North Britain, the ancient British tribes of the "Novantes" inhabited the whole of Western Galloway, having "Leucophibia" (the modern Whithorn) for their principal town, and "Rerigonium" (Loch Ryan) for their principal port, and during the Roman occupation, 397, St. Ninian introduced christianity and founded a monastery at Whithorn; after the Romans had evacuated the kingdom in 410, the Strathclyde Britons gained the upper hand, but the Anglo-Saxons overran the district in the 6th century, and Oswey, the Northumbrian king, settled at Whithorn. During the 9th and 10th centuries the county on the west was inhabited by the Picts from Ireland and the Isle of Man, and hence the name of Galloway, or "the country of the Gael," was conferred on the territory. About the 12th century Galloway passed into the hands of the Scottish king, Alexander II. In the sanguinary conflicts between Bruce and Baliol, the chieftains of Galloway long remained attached to the party of the latter, whose family they sheltered after Edward Bruce had subdued the whole country. The family of Douglas subsequently became possessed of the lordship of Galloway; but, on the attainder of the nobleman of that name in 1455, the title became extinct. It was revived, however, in 1623, and now bestows an earldom on the Stewarts, Lord Garlies, but the Maxwells of Nithsdale received a portion of the estates. The proximity to Ireland and the Isle of Man caused the country of the Gael to remain for a long period a separate community from the rest of Scotland, and the Gaelic dress, manners and language lingered here long after they fell into desuetude in the rest of the Lowlands. Their chiefs derived their authority sometimes from the kings of Scotland and at others from the kings of Northumbria, but neither could subdue the turbulence and insubordination of the chieftains or their vassals, who were very troublesome neighbours. The position of the shire so much to the west preserved it from many of the border raids, nor was it mixed up to any extent in the movements of 1715 and 1745, and Queen Mary's progress from Langside to cross to England led her through Kirkcudbrightshire.

Soil, Climate, Produce &c.—This shire is one of the most level districts in Scotland; and the hills, of which there are none of great altitude, are generally pretty free from rocks; the best lands lie near the shores, the inland division being more elevated, and largely mixed with heath and moss. The major part of the soil is of that kind sometimes called a dry loam, though it often inclines to a gravelly nature. The county presents an exposure to the south, and its waters mostly descend to the Irish Sea. The climate is moist, with winds from the south-west, which prevail during the greater part of the year. In early times this district of Galloway, like most other sections of the country, was covered with woods; and in modern days planting has been pursued most extensively, and the salutary improvements that have been effected in this county have been ascribed to the efforts of the Agricultural Society of Dumfries. Since that period black cattle, wool, sheep and swine are largely exported. This district has long been pre-eminent as being an excellent pastoral one, and for the superiority of its wool. The chief crops are: oats, 35,313 acres; turnips, 16,429; barley, 931; potatoes, 1,530; the total corn crops being 36,999, and green crop, 18,618 acres; land under grass, 66,626 acres; permanent pasture, 30,527; the total area of land and water is 313,576 acres; heath land, 105,216 acres; the live stock in 1894 was: horses, 6,750; cattle, 47,833; sheep, 119,660 and pigs, 11,419. The mineral resources of the county are by no means extensive. There is no coal, at least not for any useful purpose; and although there is plenty of iron ore, the absence of the former article renders the latter of comparatively little value. In the northern part of the Rhinns the existence of sandstone has been ascertained. Quarries of slate, of different qualities, are found in various places, and lead mines were formerly wrought within the district. The shipping trade of Wigtownshire has felt the impetus of steam navigation, the ports of Stranraer, Wigtown and Whithorn deriving considerable benefit; and at one time Portpatrick was the station for the mail steam packets communicating with Ireland. The coasting trade of the county is considerable. There is considerable activity in the fisheries connected with the numerous ports and lochs. The number of fishing boats registered at the ports of Stranraer and Wigtown in 1894 was 203, with aggregate tonnage 446, employing 468 hands, and there were also 28 vessels registered at these ports with an aggregate tonnage of 2,184. There is an almost entire absence of manufactures in this shire, if we except mills at Kirkcowan and Minnigaff, at which blankets, tweeds &c. are made. The great industry of Wigtownshire is, however, the production of cheese by the farmers of the Rhinns district of the county, who have been for many years the principal prize takers for the celebrated Cheddar cheese made by them.

Rivers and Mountains.—This county has no considerable rivers; the principal are the Cree, the Bladenoch, and the Tarf, with a few of smaller size. The Cree, which is a boundary river between this county and the stewartry of Kirkcudbright, rises in Carrick, in Ayrshire; after forming a lake at the head of Wigtownshire, it flows again as a stream, and, passing Newton Stewart on the east, falls into a creek at the head of Wigtown Bay. The Bladenoch also has its source in Carrick, and, after running a course of 24 miles, falls into Wigtown Bay. The Tarf issues from a small lake in Ayrshire, and, after a course of 21 miles, unites with the Bladenoch. The mountains, with their elevations above the level of the sea, are—Lang, 1,[illegible]08 feet; Mochrum Fell, 1,020 feet; Knock of Luce, 1,014 feet and Barhullion, 814 feet. The railway system belongs to the Glasgow and South-Western and the Portpatrick and Wigtownshire lines; the former running south from Ayr and Girvan enters the county 3 miles north of Glenwhilly station and running through New Luce to Dunragit station, where it joins the Portpatrick and Wigtownshire railway, which is an independent line leaving Newton Stewart and running westward through Glenluce to Stranraer, from whence it sends a branch to Portpatrick and also sending a branch from Newton Stewart southward to Wigtown and Whithorn.

Divisions, Representation &c.—Wigtownshire comprehends 17 parishes and the small islands called The Scares, not attached to any parish, and has three royal burghs, namely, Wigtown, Stranraer and Whithorn. Prior to the "Redistribution of Seats Bill, 1885," these three last-mentioned towns, in conjunction with New Galloway, returned one member to Parliament; but on the passing of that Bill the representation was merged in the counties. The county sends one member. The parliamentary constituency in 1891-2 numbered 5,620. The burghs of barony in the shire are Newton Stewart, Garlieston, Kirkcowan, Glenluce and Portpatrick; it has several thriving villages, and a number of small seaports, or natural harbours, and many mansions and seats. The valuation of the county for 1894-5 was (exclusive of railways, £13,258) £200,584.

GARLIESTON is a seaport, village and burgh of barony in the parish of Sorbie, at the head of Garlieston Bay (a small haven on the west side of Wigtown Bay). The place is built in the form of a semicircle, facing the sea, with a safe and commodious harbour, capable of receiving a large number of vessels. From the pier-head the Ross light bears south-east-by-east. The tide at the spring flow rises 18 feet. Regular steam communication is maintained between this port and Liverpool once a fortnight, and there are traders occasionally. The Broughton and Poutenburn streams, which here flow into the bay, are crossed by several bridges. Garlieston is a terminal station of a short line from Millisle on the Newton Stewart and Whithorn branch of the Portpatrick and Wigtownshire joint railway, and is about 8 miles south from Wigtown. GLENLUCE, see OLD LUCE.

INCH is a parish, in Wigtownshire poor combination and Stranraer small debt court district; it is about 8 miles in length, about 6 of which extend along the eastern shore of Loch Ryan, and is about 6 broad, bounded on the north by Ayrshire, east by the water of Luce, which separates it from New Luce, south-east by Old Luce, south by the Pittanton Burn, which divides it from Stoneykirk, and west by Portpatrick and Leswalt. A portion of the burgh of Stranraer is in this parish. The kirk is 1½ miles north from Castle Kennedy station, which is in the parish, on the Portpatrick and Wigtownshire railway, 3 east from Stranraer and 21 west from Newton Stewart. The highest mountains in the parish are—Mid Moile, 844 feet high; Brockloch Fell, 769 feet, and Drummuckloch Boech, 700 feet. The parish church stands on the margin of the lake, in which there is a small beautifully wooded island: the lake is nearly divided by a neck of land, on which are the ruins of Castle Kennedy, the property of the Earl of Stair, and is surrounded with delightful and picturesque scenery: the collection of araucarias is one of the attractions of the place to all lovers of horticulture, and it is said to be the finest collection in Great Britain. In an island on the loch is a heronry. The castle was formerly the seat of the family of the Earls of Cassillis, who for 300 years took a leading part in Galloway affairs: it was accidentally burnt down in 1715, during the absence of the family, and has ever since remained a ruin; by this misfortune many historical papers were lost: the earl throws open to the public the grounds every Wednesday and Saturday. At a short distance south of Inch church, on a peninsula in a small lake, are the remains of Soulseat Monastery, founded about 1160, by Fergus, Lord of Galloway, for monks of the Premonstratensian order: its abbot was the head of his order in Scotland. Loch Inch Castle is the residence of the Earl of Stair K.T., LL.D. lord lieutenant of the county. Acreage, 30,844; rateable value, £20,645; population in 1881, 3,766, in 1891, 3,981, of which 1,820 were in the burgh of Stranraer.

Cairnryan is a small village in this parish, on the eastern margin of Loch Ryan, on Cairn Point, 6 miles north-north-east from Stranraer, the nearest railway station. The harbour here affords safe anchorage for vessels, which frequently take refuge here, and there is a lofty lighthouse for their guidance. Loch Ryan House, close to the village, is the residence of John Alex. Agnew Wallace esq. At Castle Kennedy is a station on the Portpatrick and Wigtownshire railway.

KIRKCOWAN is a parish, village and burgh of barony, in Wigtownshire poor combination and Wigtown small debt court district. It extends from north to south 15 miles, by a general breadth of about 5, bounded on the west by the Tarf water, which divides it from the parishes of New Luce and Old Luce, south by Mochrum and Kirkinner, east by the Baldenoch river, which separates it from Penninghame, and north by Ayrshire. The village is on the Tarf water, near its junction with the Baldenoch, 10 miles north-east from Glenluce, 8 north-west from Wigtown and 7 south-east from Newton Stewart. The Portpatrick and Wigtownshire Joint railway have a station a quarter of a mile of the village. Loch Ronald, about 1 mile long by three-quarters of a mile broad, is in the parish. The church was erected in 1829; its site, as well as the churchyard, was given by the late Captain W. C. Hamilton, of Craiglaw. There are woollen factories adjoining the village, belonging respectively to Messrs. William Armstrong and Son and Mr. William Milroy, which furnish employment to many of the inhabitants. The principal hotel is the "Commercial." The surface of this district is various, consisting of moorland interspersed with pieces of arable land. Acreage of the parish, 35,864; rateable value, £9,235; population in 1881, 1,307, and in 1891, 1,263, of which 661 were returned for the village.

KIRKINNER is a parish, in Wigtownshire poor combination and Wigtown small debt court district, and extends 3 miles along Wigtown Bay, the Bladnoch water dividing it on the north from Wigtown parish, having Mochrum on its western boundary and Sorbie on the south. The kirk town is about 3 miles south from Wigtown, on the road to Garlieston, and is remarkable for its beautiful and picturesque scenery; it has a station on the Wigtown and Whithorn branch of the Portpatrick and Wigtownshire joint railway, and is 3½ miles south from Wigtown and about 9 south from Newton Stewart. The Killantrae burn flows through the centre of the parish. The ruins of Longcastle church (the parish now incorporated with Kirkinner) stand at the southern extremity of the parish. Here are also the remains of the ancient castle of Baldoon, formerly a residence of the Dunbars, an incident in which family is supposed to have served as the foundation of the story of the "Bride of Lammermoor." Barnbarroch, a stately mansion, is the seat of Captain Patrick A. Vans-Agnew; it is in a park about one mile long by about three-quarters of a mile wide, through which the Bladnoch water flows. Acreage of the parish, 15,251; rateable value, £13,108; population in 1881, 1,597, and in 1891, 1,455.

Whauphill is a small village in the parish of Kirkinner, about 5 miles south from Wigtown, and is a station on the Portpatrick and Wigtownshire joint railway.

KIRKMAIDEN parish occupies a great portion of the western limb or peninsula of Wigtownshire, projecting into the Irish Sea, with Luce Bay on the east, and tapering to a point that inclines to the east. This parish, which is in Wigtownshire poor combination and Stranraer small debt court district, comprehends the most southerly district of Scotland, and is about 12 miles in length and from 1½ to 3 in breadth; it still has a wild appearance, but produces good crops of corn and potatoes, and has a very large number of dairy farms. The coast is generally bold, and indented by caves scooped out by the endless operations of the sea. On both sides of the peninsula, however, there are several good anchoring grounds. There is a tolerable harbour at Drummore, in Luce Bay, on the east coast, where the coast guard has a station, under the command of a chief boatman. Salmon and cod fishing is carried on at Drummore. The church, a plain edifice, is near the centre of the parish, not far from Drummore Bay, 6 miles from the Mull of Galloway, 35 south-west from Wigtown, 36 south-west from Newton Stewart, 20 south-east from Stranraer, and 16 south-east from Portpatrick station on the Portpatrick and Wigtownshire railway. On the estate of James M'Douall esq. of Logan, is a fish pond, hewn out of the solid rock, and having communication with the sea by means of an ingeniously contrived iron grating; some of the fish in this artificial reservoir have been rendered so tame that they will feed from the hand. The parish of Kirkmaiden has an area of 13,730 acres; rateable value, £13,165; the population in 1881 was 2,409, and in 1891, 2,192.

Drummore is a village about one mile east from Kirkmaiden. The population in 1891 was 529.

OLD LUCE is a parish, in Wigtownshire poor combination and Stranraer small debt court district, and is about 12 miles long by a width varying from 3½ to 7½, bounded on the north by Inch and New Luce, north-east by Drumpail Burn, which separates it from Kirkcowan, east by Mochrum and south by Luce Bay. Glenluce is a village and burgh of barony on the banks of the river Luce, and on the road from Newton Stewart to Stranraer, at the head of Luce Bay, which here forms a tolerably good harbour for small vessels; it is 19 miles east from Portpatrick, 18 west from Wigtown, 16 south-west from Newton Stewart and 10 east-by-south from Stranraer. The Portpatrick and Wigtownshire joint line runs through the town, and is joined by the Girvan line at Dunragit station, which is in the parish. The principal hotel is the "King's Arms." There is a monthly fair or market held here (for cattle) from the first Friday in April to the first Friday in December. About a mile to the north of the church, further up the vale (from which the village takes its name), are the ruins of Luce Abbey, founded by Rolland, Lord of Galloway, in 1190, which, when in its perfect state, must have been an extensive building: the mass of prostrate fragments at present cover about an acre and a half: the only part now remaining entire is a small apartment on the east side of the square, within which latter stood the cloisters; in the middle of this apartment stands a pillar, about 14 feet high, from which eight arches spring; this is the Chapter House: tradition reports Michael Scott, of cabalistic memory, to have been at one time abbot of this establishment, and adds that his magical library still exists under a particular part of the ruins; to ascertain which, a person excavated part of the ground, and found many curiosities, together with several skeletons in an upright position; the explorer, however, having been seized with insanity, the search was interrupted, and the superstitions of the people prevented others from pursuing the investigation: in the collections of the Ayrshire and Galloway Archæological Association, vol. v. a full description is given of the abbey, with plans: it is the seventh in the order of foundation of Cistercian abbeys in Scotland: the total length was about 180 feet. The district is full of interest for archæologists. The Rev. George Wilson has procured for the Museum of Antiquities, in Edinburgh, above 6,000 worked flints and many articles of the stone and bronze ages: there are also a number of clay urns and some interesting stone crosses. Dunragit House, in this parish, is the seat of John Charles Cuninghame esq. D.L., J.P. The Earl of Stair K.T., L.L. John Charles Cuninghame esq. D.L., J.P. Sir Mark J. McTaggart Stewart bart. D.L., J.P. and James M'Douall esq. D.L., J.P. of Logan, are the principal landowners. Acreage of the parish, 31,596; rateable value, £18,528; population in 1881, 2,447, and in 1891, 2,517; of the village of Glenluce, 922. St. Helena Island, with 4 inhabitants in 1891, is included in this parish.

MOCHRUM is a parish, in Wigtownshire poor combination and Wigtown small debt court district, and is about 10 miles in length and extends inland between 4 and 5 miles, bounded on the west by Old Luce, north by Kirkcowan, east by Kirkinner, and south-west by Luce Bay. The kirk is 4½ miles south-west from Whauphill station on the Wigtown branch of the Portpatrick and Wigtownshire railway, and about 8 south-west from Wigtown. Mochrum Loch, about 1½ miles long by half a mile wide, and Castle Loch, 1 mile in length by hal a mile in breadth, and four smaller lochs are in the parish. Malzie water, a tributary of the Bladenoch, is formed from the first-named lochs. The Castle, or "Old Place" of Mochrum, surrounded by lakes is a very ancient and picturesque building in an inland part of the parish: it was formerly the family seat of the Dunbars, knights of Mochrum, but has for many years been the property of the Marquess of Bute, who has made alterations at considerable expense In this parish is Monreith, the handsome residence and demesne of Sir Herbert Eustace Maxwell bart. M.P., D.L., J.P. proprietor of the place: the mansion, which stands on the bank of a fine lake, commands an extensive prospect of the Bay of Luce, the shore of Galloway, the Isle of Man and the coast of Cumberland. Near it is an old castle surrounded by lofty trees, and contiguous are the remains of the old parish church, now occupied as a place of sepulture by the family of Maxwell, whose ancestors formerly possessed the estate. Mochrum Park is the seat of Sir Uthred Dunbar bart. D.L. Acreage of the parish, 24,071; rateable value, £13,964; population in 1881, 2,315, and in 1891, 2,166, of which 679 are in Port William village, of which full particulars are given under a separate heading.

NEWTON STEWART.

NEWTON STEWART is a thriving town and burgh of barony and police burgh, principally in the parish of Penninghame, with a small portion on the opposite side of the stream in the parish of Minnigaff, county of Kirkcudbright. It is on the high road from Dumfries to Portpatrick, and on the right bank of the river Cree, here crossed by a bridge of five arches, connecting the two divisions of the town: it has a station on the Portpatrick and Wigtownshire railway, and is also the junction for the Wigtownshire railway to Garlieston and Whithorn, and is 121 miles south-west from Edinburgh, 82 south from Glasgow, 52 west from Dumfries, 26 east from Stranraer and 8 north from Wigtown. The town owes its origin to a younger branch of the Stewarts, Earls of Galloway, who possessed the estate of Castle-Stewart, and founded the village upon it, to which he gave the name of Newton Stewart. About the year 1778, the estate fell into the hands of William Douglas esq. of Carlingwark, who founded the town of Castle-Douglas, when it was created a burgh of barony under the title of Newton-Douglas, but it subsequently resumed its original name. Formerly the houses consisted but of one storey and were covered with thatch, but the greater portion are now two storeys in height and slated. The town is principally composed of one large street, in the centre of which is the Town House, and is governed by a provost, two bailies and six councillors. At the upper extremity of that part of the town in Minnigaff parish, there is a large moat hill, where David Graham, brother to Claverhouse, and superior of this district prior to the Revolution, administered justice. Works were completed in 1882 for providing water by gravitation, the source of supply being the Coldstream burn, about 4 miles distant: about half way between the intake at the burn and the town, a tank and filter have been constructed, the former having a capacity of 100,000 gallons; the cost of the works was upwards of £4,000. The places of worship are the Established church, an elegant modern structure, a Free church, a United Presbyterian church, and one for Roman Catholics. The Douglas Academy, founded by Samuel Douglas esq. of Jamaica, and the Ewart Institute, founded by James and John Ewart, merchants of this district, are richly endowed educational establishments; they have been incorporated under the title of the Newton Stewart Educational Trust. An institution, called the Industrial Home, has been founded by a few benevolent ladies, for the support of about fifty destitute and orphan girls. M'Millan Hall, in the centre of the town, is a structure in the Italian style, opened in 1885, and erected at a cost of £5,000, which sum was left for that purpose by the family from which the hall derives its name, and who formerly carried on business in Newton Stewart. There is a Mechanics' Institute in the town, liberally supported by the gentry of the neighbourhood, the news-room being supplied with the leading newspapers and periodicals, and is open to the public every evening: the library contains about 1,000 volumes. The cotton manufacture was formerly carried on here and in the neighbourhood to some extent, but it is now extinct. The staple at present is wool, furnished from the surrounding country, and mostly supplied to the Yorkshire markets. The weekly market is held on Friday; cattle markets are held on the second Friday in every month, and the annual hiring fairs are held on the second Friday in April and October and the horse fairs in February, June and November. The British Linen Company, the National Bank of Scotland Limited and the Clydesdale Bank Limited and the Commercial Bank have each a branch here. The principal hotels are the "Galloway Arms" and the "Crown." A newspaper called the "Galloway Gazette" is published every Saturday. A Gothic monument to Randolph, 9th Earl of Galloway, was erected in 1875, at a cost of £1,000. The population of the burgh in 1881 was 3,070, and in 1891, 2,332, and of the town, 2,738.

PORT LOGAN, see KIRKMAIDEN.

PORTPATRICK is a seaport town burgh of barony, and a parish, on the Irish Sea and west coast of the county, in Wigtownshire poor combination and Stranraer small debt court district. The parish is about 5 miles from south-west to north-east and 3 from north-west to south-east, bounded by the parish of Leswalt on the north-west, Inch on the north-east, Stoneykirk on the south-east, and the Irish Sea on the south-west. The town is the terminus of the Portpatrick and Wigtownshire railway, by which it has communication, via Girvan, with the north and west of Scotland, and via Castle Douglas and Dumfries, to the south of Scotland and England. At Colfin, about 3 miles north-east from Portpatrick, is a station on the first-named line. The port is 133 miles south-west from Edinburgh, 89 south-south-west from Glasgow, between 34 and 35 west from Wigtown, the same distance west-by-south from Newton Stewart, rather more than 7 south-west from Stranraer, 117 from Dublin, 36 from Belfast and 21 from Donaghadee (19 nautical), and is on the coast of the North Channel, and was for about 200 years the great thoroughfare from the north of Ireland, being the nearest port of Great Britain to that country, and the best place of crossing from one country to the other. The town is small, but its situation is delightful, having a fine southern exposure backed by a ridge of small hills, and is a great resort for visitors during the summer months on account of the salubrity of its climate. It was formerly, with the estate of Dunskey, the property of Lord Montgomery, whose residence was the old castle of Dunskey, which stands in the neighbourhood on the brink of a precipice overhanging the sea, and was once a building of considerable strength, as appears from its interesting remains. The late Sir James Hunter-Blair subsequently became possessed of the castle, and it is to the exertion of that gentleman that the town and harbour are indebted for many improvements. The quay, on which is a lighthouse, is now almost in ruins. Many years ago extensive and important improvements were made at the harbour, under the auspices of the Government and direction of Sir John Rennie, for the accommodation of Her Majesty's packets, and a new basin of about 200 feet square, which is connected with the harbour by means of a channel containing ten feet of water at low tides, was constructed. The mail communication between this place and Ireland, however, ceased in the year 1849, and since that date the business of this locality has diminished to a great extent. The town is also a lifeboat and rocket apparatus station. The parish church is a neat edifice with an embattled tower: the Free church, erected in 1888, is a handsome building in the Gothic style. Acreage of the parish, 9,094; rateable value, £6,141; population in 1881, 1,285, and in 1891, 1,219; of the town, 520.

THE SCARES are a group of small islands, comprising 4 acres not attached to any civil parish; they are at the entrance of Luce Bay, about mid-way between the Mull of Galloway, the southern point of Kirkmaiden parish and Burrow Head, at the southern extremity of Whithorn parish.

SHEUCHAN, see STRANRAER.

SORBIE is a parish, on the south side of the mouth of Wigtown Bay, and contains the village of Sorbie and the seaport village of Garlieston (which latter see); the first-named is 3 miles inland to the west of Garlieston and 6 south from Wigtown, with a station on the Portpatrick and Wigtownshire railway; the parish, which is in the small debt court district of Wigtown and Wigtownshire poor combination, lies for about 9 miles along the coast, which is indented by the bays of Garlieston and Rigg, and possesses two bold headlands, Eggerness to the north and Cruggleton Head to the south of these bays; the boundaries are Kirkinner parish on the north, Glasserton and Whithorn on the west, and the latter on the south-west. The ancient Tower of Sorbie, now a ruin, is about 1 mile north-west of Garlieston and 2 east of the village; it was a stronghold or peel of the Sorby family, and subsequently passed to the Hannays. Between the headlands of Eggerness and Cruggleton is the Park and House of Galloway, erected in 1740, a seat of the Earl of Galloway; and on the headlands themselves are the remains of two ancient castles, one of which, Cruggleton Castle, is believed to have been built by the Danes and Norwegians in 1098, and shortly afterwards fell into the possession of the Kerlies, or M'Kerlies, who retained possession until the Reformation. Previously, they owned Carolton, now Carleton Castle, near Girvan, which the Cathcarts obtained in 1824. Cruggleton Castle is celebrated for one of the successful exploits of Sir William Wallace, the great Scottish patriot: it was taken by treachery, and Sir William retook it for his friend William Kerlie. Eggerness was also built by the Danes, but no particular account has been handed down. The Established church at Millisle, about 1 mile from Garlieston, and 2 from Sorbie, opened in 1877, is a fine Gothic structure, cruciform in shape, with tower and spire rising to a height of over 60 feet, and was erected at a cost of about £2,500. The area of the parish comprises 9,611 acres; rateable value, £14,738; the population in 1891 was 1,563, including 632 in Garlieston and 179 in Sorbie village; in 1881 the total population was 1,696.

STONEYKIRK (more properly Steven's Kirk) is a parish in Wigtownshire poor combination and Stranraer small debt court district, extending about 7 miles in length by from 3 to 5 in breadth, and comprehends the three old parishes of Stoneykirk, Clackshant and Toskerton, and it lies in the western peninsula of the county, to the north of Kirkmaiden, and has an east and south-east coast line on Luce Bay of about 6 miles, and about 7 on the Irish Channel, on its western side, and is bounded on the north by Portpatrick, the Piltanton burn separating from Inch and Old Luce. The kirk is 6 miles south-east from Stranraer, and about the same distance east from Portpatrick, both stations on the Portpatrick and Wigtownshire railway. The surface is generally hilly and of a pastoral character; the low grounds are arable, and in some places planted. Balgreggan, the seat of Mrs. Maitland, stands in a park about 1 mile square: on the estate is an artificial mound, supposed to be of Roman origin, and used as a beacon in time of war; there is likewise another of a similar kind on the estate of the late Sir John M'Taggart, of Ardwell House. The parish contains 19,481 acres; rateable value, £18,561; population in 1881, 2,766, and in 1891, 2,703.

STRANRAER.

STRANRAER (or Stranrawer) is an ancient town, a royal and police burgh and the seat of a presbytery and parish, in Wigtownshire poor combination. The police burgh comprises, in addition to the parish, parts of the parishes of Inch and Leswalt. The town is seated at the head of the sea loch, Loch Ryan, which extends for 8 miles from its mouth, and is about 2½ miles wide at its broadest part, and the burgh has two stations, one in the town and the other at the harbour, on the Portpatrick and Wigtownshire railway. The Glasgow and South Western and the North British railways have both running powers into Stranraer. The burgh is 81 miles south-south-west from Glasgow, nearly 10 north-west from Glenluce, rather more than 8 north-east from Portpatrick, and 30 west from Wigtown, and, as a royal burgh, is governed by a provost, two bailies, a dean of guild and fourteen councillors. A justice of peace court is held on the first Monday in every month, a burgh court occasionally on Saturday, and the sheriff of the county holds a court weekly, and a small debt court is held fortnightly, on Thursdays, during session. The bay of Stranraer affords excellent anchorage, as the motto on the burgh arms (Tutissima Statio) implies, and the harbour is now large and commodious, consisting of west pier, east pier, and breastwork, affording excellent accommodation to all classes of vessels: the east pier is used for the large cross-channel traffic now passing by the Stranraer route between Great Britain and Ireland, and is connected with the railway by a harbour branch, by which cattle, goods and passengers are conveyed direct from the steamers: there is 18 feet of water at high tide at the east pier, and vessels of 1,100 tons burthen can discharge there. The depth of water in the loch, which is sheltered from all winds, is such as to allow ships to ride at anchor with perfect safety. It was at Cairnryan, on this loch, that the Prince of Wales first landed on Scottish soil. The bay at one time afforded a splendid supply of oysters, the right of fishing for which belongs exclusively, by ancient charter, to Sir William Wallace, of Loch Ryan; the beds have latterly become impoverished, thus rendering the fishery unprofitable. There are, however, several kinds of white fish caught, and occasionally herrings are got equal in quality to the best obtained on any other part of the Scottish coast. In 1894, the number of fishing boats registered under the "Sea Fisheries Act, 1868," as belonging to the port was 131, with a tonnage of 317, which give employment to 350 men and boys, fishing boats and their implements to be known by the letters S.R.: in the same year, under the "Merchant Shipping Acts," 7 vessels of 1,214 tons were registered as belonging to the port. The sea bathing is excellent, and the loch is beautifully situated for villas. There is a coastguard station here and a custom house. The Established church, in Church street, is a handsome structure in the Pointed style, with a lofty front surmounted with pinnacles; the interior is capacious, with galleries. The second church connected with the Establishment is at the western extremity of the town, on a lofty eminence, and with its tower is a conspicuous landmark from the loch: this church was called by the late eminent Scottish divine, Dr. Chalmers, when on a visit, "the visible church," from its commanding appearance from all sides. The cemetery, beautifully situated above the town, presents a fine view of the loch; it is very tastefully laid out, and contains some monuments. A Reformatory, now under Government control, was opened in 1855: wood turning, bookbinding, and the manufacture of netting, twine and paper bags are carried on in the institution, besides the making of clothing and shoes for the requirements of the inmates. The County Buildings, in Lewis street, opened in 1874, contain court house, town hall, and offices for the procurator fiscal, sheriff clerk and police. The old Town Hall, in George street, is now used as an armoury and drill hall for the volunteers. Stranraer has a brewery and mills, through which large quantities of grain pass every year: it is particularly noticeable for the extensive nurseries on all sides of the town, which afford employment to many persons. The district is agricultural, grain, cheese and all kinds of farm produce and cattle being conveyed to Glasgow regularly by railway and twice a week by steamer. The market is held on Friday. The following are the annual fairs:—for horses, the first Monday in January, the Thursday before the 29th of June and the Monday before the second Thursday in October; for cattle, on the third Friday in every month, commencing in April and ending in November: other fairs for general business are also held in May and August. The Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, the Clydesdale Bank Limited, the British Linen Company and the National Bank of Scotland Limited have branches in the town. The principal inns are the "King's Arms," Meikle's hotel, the "George," the "Albion" and the "Royal." In the centre of the town stands a building, originally a castle, of considerable antiquity, but the date of its foundation has not been satisfactorily ascertained; it is mentioned in a charter granted by James VI. and is called the "Tower, fortalice and manor place of Chapell," and was once the residence of the family of Kennedy, of Chapel and Chrychan: the Tower, or Castle, as it is now termed, was used by Graham of Claverhouse as his head quarters in the district during the Covenanting period: in the year 1614 it was inhabited by John Kennedy, of Grennan, and Elizabeth, his wife, then Lady Auchtriloor. The lands of Auchtriloor are immediately contiguous to the burgh of Stranraer, and are now the property of the Earl of Stair K.T. The area of the civil parish and royal burgh is 55 acres; rateable value, £22,582; the population in 1831 was 3,528, and in 1891, 3,158; the population of the police burgh in 1891 was: Stranraer, 3,158; part of Inch, 1,820, and part of Leswalt, 1,215, total 6,193.

Sheuchan is an ecclesiastical parish taken from those of Leswalt and Portpatrick; it comprises part of the burgh of Stranraer. The population in 1891 was 1,420.

WHAUPHILL, see KIRKINNER.

WHITHORN (or Whithern), a parish and village and royal burgh, in the south-east of the county, 11 miles south from Wigtown, 18 by rail from Newton Stewart and 26 from Stranraer, with a terminal station on the Whithorn branch of the Port Patrick and Wigtownshire railway. The parish, which is in the small debt court district of Wigtown and Wigtownshire poor combination, is bounded on the north by the parish of Sorbie, north-west and south-west by Glasserton, and on the south and east by the Irish Channel. In A.D. 80, when the Romans first arrived, this district was peopled by the Novantes, and the town was one of some importance; it was mentioned by Ptolemy under the name of Leucophibia; the Saxons called it Hwitoern, and from the latter the appellation Whithern is derived. St. Ninian built a church here in 397, and attached a monastery to it; this church the Venerable Bede mentioned as being the first one built of stone in Scotland: during the 8th century it was the seat of the bishops of CandidaCasa, and it formed the episcopal capital of a bishopric of Galloway in the 12th century: after the period of the Reformation, however, it is seldom mentioned in public transactions, and seems to have sunk into obscurity. The town consists chiefly of one street running from north to south with several others diverging from it. From successive kings Whithorn received various charters constituting it a burgh of barony; it is now a royal burgh, but the period when it attained that distinction does not appear: it is governed by a provost, two bailies and six councillors. The Town Hall (opened in 1885) is a plain but substantially-built structure, erected at a cost of £1,100, obtained by public subscription, and will accommodate about 500 persons. The local trade is very inconsiderable, and merely of a retail character. There are two banking establishments, branches respectively of the Clydesdale Bank Limited and the National Bank of Scotland Limited. The inhabitants support a subscription library and a Bible Society. The places of worship are the parish church, a Free church, one each for United and Reformed Presbyterians and Roman Catholics. The parish church is a spacious building, superior to most of the parish kirks in this county; it is erected partly on the ruins of the priory founded by St. Ninian, of which there now only remains a fine 12th century chancel, roofless, but containing some good Early English work, and a perfect western doorway. The see has long been united to that of Glasgow, and now forms part of the revived see designated Glasgow and Galloway: in the building may be found shields with the armorial bearings of Scotland, the bishops of Galloway, and the Coulthartes of Coulthart. Castlewigg Castle, 3 miles north-west of the village, is the residence of Francis Head esq. J.P.

The Isle of Whithorn is a village on the east coast, about 3 miles south-east from the railway station at Whithorn, of which it is the port, and near Burrow Head. Near the village stand the remains of an old church. The village contains a Free church and Board schools. Population in 1881, 352, and in 1891, 316.

A cattle market is held on the first Thursday after first Friday in each month from April to December, and an annual fair in July. The area comprises 11,891 acres; rateable value, £17,877; the population of the parish in 1891 was 2,574, including 1,403 in the burgh, and 316 in Isle of Whithorn, and in 1881, the figures were 2,929 total population, 1,653 in the burgh and 352 in Isle of Whithorn.

WIGTOWN.

WIGTOWN is a royal burgh, the seat of a presbytery, parish and the capital of the county, and is in Wigtownshire poor combination. The parish extends 5 miles in length by 4 in breadth, and is bounded on the south by the Bladenoch river, north-west and north-east by Newton Stewart and east by Wigtown Bay. It has several eminences throughout, but is in general flat and fertile. The Portpatrick and Wigtownshire railway has a branch from Stranraer, which connects the town with the rest of Scotland and with England. The town is pleasantly seated on an eminence near the north side of the Bladnoch Water, 2 miles from its junction with the Cree, or Bay of Wigtown, and is 105 miles south-south-west from Edinburgh, 58 south-west from Dumfries, 26 east-by-south from Stranraer, and 8 south from Newton Stewart. It is a place of considerable antiquity, having come into existence during the Middle Ages, from the erection of a castle on the spot by a band of Saxon invaders, who conferred on it the name of Wig, from the place having been contested in a battle, the adjunct "ton" or "town" being given when the town arose. The castle of Wigtown subsequently became a royal residence, but the town itself does not appear to have been conspicuous till the reign of David II. when it gave the title of earl to the family of Fleming. In the year 1581, Wigtown was specified as one of the king's free burghs: as a royal burgh it is governed by a provost, two bailies and fifteen councillors. The principal street is a parallelogram of which the internal space is enclosed by a wall and iron railings, and the centre laid out in walks and a bowling green, forming an agreeable promenade for the inhabitants: at the end is a modern cross of granite, sculptured in an elegant manner; at the other extremity are the County Buildings, having a tower of considerable height: the buildings contain the court room, the sheriff's small debt court and the ordinary courts, which latter are held every Tuesday in time of session; the justice of peace court is held the first Friday in every month. Wigtown harbour is safe, and has a depth of water for vessels of 300 tons: it is the seat of a customs port, its limits being defined by the "Customs Act, 1846," to include the creeks of Wigtownshire and those of the stewartry of Kirkcudbright, from the Mull of Galloway to the mouth of the river Fleet. In 1894 the number of fishing boats registered under the "Sea Fisheries Act, 1868," as belonging to the port was 72, with a tonnage of 129, employing 128 men and boys; fishing boats and their implements to be known by the letters W. N. Under the "Merchant Shipping Acts," 21 vessels of 970 tons were registered as belonging to the port in 1894. The market, entitled by charter to be holden on Saturday, is now discontinued. Fairs are also chartered to be held at Candlemas on the first Monday in April and the first Friday in July and August, all old style, but they also are discontinued: a monthly cattle market, on the fourth Friday of each month during the season, has been established, and there is an annual cattle show in July, which is numerously attended. In the town are branches of the British Linen Company, the National Bank of Scotland Limited and the Clydesdale Bank Limited. A monument has been erected here to Margaret Wilson and Margaret M'Lachlan, the martyrs who perished in the Bladnoch Water, in the year 1685: it is on the top of Windyhill, from which there is a magnificent view of the town and surrounding country, and was constructed by public subscription at a cost of £200. At the western extremity of the parish are 19 large granite stones, placed in a circular form, and supposed to have belonged to a Druidical place of worship or sacrifice, while tradition points to the spot as the tomb of King Galdus. The parish of Wigtown contains 7,805 acres; rateable value, £11,291; in 1881 the population was 2,195, and in 1891, 1,911, the town numbering 1,445.
